IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF FLOYD COUNTY,
STATE OF GEORGIA

STATE OF GEORGIA

INDICTMENT

vs.

#86-2218-2

TIMOTHY TYRONE FOSTER /

MOTION TO PRECLUDE THE PROSECUTION FROM USING ITS PEREMPTORY CHALLENGES TO EXCLUDE BLACKS

(Filed Dec. 11, 1986)

Defendant moves this Court pursuant to the Sixth, Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution and from Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. ___, 106 S.Ct. 1712, 90 L.Ed 2d 69 (1986) for an order preventing the State from utilizing its peremptory challenges in a biased manner to exclude black persons from serving on the jury in this case. In support of this motion, Defendant shows the Court as follows:

1. That he is an indigent eighteen year old black person accused of the capital murder of an elderly white lady, and the State is seeking the death penalty.

2. The District Attorney's office in this County and his staff have over a long period of time excluded members of the black race from being allowed to serve on juries with a black Defendant and white victim. This practice follows two centuries of discrimination against black people in every aspect of the criminal justice system. This practice violates the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution and as Justice Marshal indicates in his concurring opinion in Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. ___, 106 S.Ct. 1712, 1726, 90 L.Ed 2d 69 (1986) the pernicious nature of the racial discriminatory use of peremptory challenges is repugnant to the Equal Protection Clause.

3. It is anticipated that the District Attorney's office will attempt to continue its long pattern of racial discrimination in the exercise of its peremptory challenges.

4. The exclusion of members of a specific group from the jury when a Defendant who is a member of that group is being tried is done in order that the Defendant will receive excessive punishment if found guilty and to inject racial prejudice into the fact finding process and sentencing determination by the jury.

5. There is no non-racial basis for the prosecution's use of its peremptory challenges to exclude a disproportionate number of blacks from the jury.

6. The exclusion of a disproportionate number of black persons from Defendant's jury would violate his right to an impartial jury by a fair cross-section of the community guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution. Taylor v. Louisiana, 419 U.S. 522 (1975). As recognized by the United States Supreme Court, "the exclusion of Negroes from jury service because of their race 'contravenes the very idea of a jury – a truly representative of the community’ . . . ” Id. at 530. Thus, “the Sixth Amendment prohibits the prosecution’s use of challenges to discriminate on the basis of race . . . ” McCray v. Abrams, 750 D.2d 1113, 1118 (2d Cir. 1984). A person’s race simply is unrelated to his fitness as a juror. Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. ___, 106 S.Ct. 1712, 1718, 90 L.Ed 2d 69 (1986).

7. There is even a move [sic] compelling need for an impartial jury in a capital case in order that there be enhanced reliability in both the guilt-innocence as well as sentencing phase of trial pursuant to the Eighth Amendment.

8. Thus, if the prosecution [sic] is permitted to strike all black persons or a disproportionate number of black persons from the jury, the Defendant will be denied his rights to a fair trial, to equal protection of the law, to due process, and to protection from cruel and unusual punishment, guaranteed to him and to all other people in this country by the Sixth, Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

WHEREFORE, Defendant requests:

(a) that this Court grant another motion by Defendant that Questionnaires [sic] be sent to all prospective jurors in this case so that there can be an accurate determination of the State’s motives when or if the State attempts to exclude blacks from this jury.

(b) that this Court restrict the District attorney from using its peremptory challenges and strikes in a racially biased manner.

(c) that this Court require the State to show that each one of its peremptory strikes of black persons is not racially motivated.

(d) for such other and further relief as this Court deems just and proper.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED

MS. GRINDSTAFF: Yes.

[1345] THE COURT: Shall we leave her in as a —

MR. LANIER: Your Honor, may we approach the bench on that?

THE COURT: All right.

(The following colloquy is held at the bench with all counsel and the defendant present):

MR. LANIER: I am going to protest the leaving of Ms. Grindstaff as an alternate. I had saved one last strike for Ms. Grindstaff due to her opposition of the death penalty. We have alternates already selected, and I have already spent the weekend looking over the alternates. I fail to see how leaving Ms. Grindstaff in the jury – it would put me in a tremendous disadvantage, Your Honor.

THE COURT: We have still got eight.

MR. LANIER: That is correct. That is the position we were in, is that she was in the panel of forty-two always. We picked eight extra alternates. That is my position.

MR. FINNELL: Your Honor, Ms. Grindstaff's views no longer become relevant. She is qualified. She is in the pool. The Court has stated that she is going to take them in the order that they come. She is the next available potential juror. She should be taken in order and not out of order just because the State [1346] has some objections to her qualifications when the Court has already qualified her.

THE COURT: She finally said that she could – in fact, she gave the correct answers to staying. I will leave her in.

(End of bench conference).

THE COURT: All right. Bring in Ms. Virginia Gaines Berry, William Jeffrey Howell, Robert E. Sumners, Walter S. Fuqua, Elizabeth Ann Hartis, Orvil K. Taliaferro, Carolyn T. Smith. That is it; isn't it? Isn't that eight?

THE CLERK: A. D. Branton.

THE COURT: Does it take him to make eight with Ms. Grindstaff?

THE CLERK: I am sorry, Judge. I didn't see Ms. Grindstaff.

THE COURT: Send them in.

(Those jurors mentioned above entered the courtroom).

THE COURT: All right. This is for the two alternates.

THE CLERK: When I call your name, please stand and remain standing until you are selected or not selected as an alternate. Bobbie Grindstaff.

MR. LANIER: Excused by the State.

THE CLERK: Virginia Berry.

[1347] MR. LANIER: The State accepts the juror.

MR. WYATT: Excused.

THE CLERK: William Jeffrey Howell.

MR. LANIER: The State accepts the juror.

MR. WYATT: We are content.

THE CLERK: Robert E. Sumners.

MR. LANIER: The State accepts the juror.

MR. WYATT: Excused, please.

THE CLERK: Walter Fuqua.

MR. LANIER: The State accepts the juror.

MR. WYATT: Excused, please.

THE CLERK: Elizabeth Hartis.

MR. LANIER: Excused by the State.

THE CLERK: Orvil Taliaferro.

MR. LANIER: The State accepts the juror.

MR. WYATT: We are content.

THE COURT: All right. That is the alternates.

MR. WYATT: Wait just a second. We are content, yes.

THE COURT: All right. That is the two alternates. All right. We are not going to need Mr. Branton or Ms. Smith. Ms. Smith, you are excused. You may go by the clerk's office to pick up your pay and turn in your badge. Mr. Branton, you are excused. Go by the clerk's office to turn in your badge and pick up your [1348] pay. Ms. Harper, I believe you were excused. So you can go and pick up your pay and turn in your badge. Is there anybody else that was excused that is still in the courtroom? Let's make sure that we have fourteen people over here. Call out the names, if you will.

THE CLERK: When I call your name, come into the box, please. Joyce Nicholson, Patricia Bing, Victor Dedeurwaerder, Billy Graves, Charlie Haulk, Donald Hall, Nancy Cadle, Stephen Horner, Arlene Blackmon, Martha Duncan, Don Huffman, Roy Hatch. And the two alternates, William Jeffrey Howell and Orvil Taliaferro.

[1352] (The jurors leave the courtroom).

THE COURT: Are there any witnesses in this case, in the courtroom?

MR. LANIER: Your Honor, other than the police officer witnesses that I am going to need for the Jackson-Denno motion.

THE COURT: Well, the first thing we need to do is take up the State's excusal of the black jurors.

MR. LANIER: Right.

THE COURT: My list is not complete. So I don't know the names.

MR. FINNELL: Your Honor, the Court might also ask anybody that has been under subpoena.

THE COURT: Pardon?

MR. FINNELL: Anybody that has been under a subpoena, not only a witness, but somebody that has been under a subpoena.

[1353] THE COURT: Is anybody in the courtroom that has a subpoena?

(No affirmative response).

THE COURT: Well, I take it that they would think they are a witness, if they have got a subpoena. Let's take care of the black jurors first. Do you have their names?

THE CLERK: I don't know who they are Judge.

MR. FINNELL: Your Honor, I can tell the Court who they are. There was Eddie Hood –

THE COURT: Eddie Hood.

MR. LANIER: Hold it. We are probably going to take this up outside their presence.

THE COURT: Wait a minute. Just stay out there.

MR. FINNELL: Evelyn Hardge, Mary Turner and Marilyn Garrett.

THE COURT: All right. The first one is Mr. Hood.

MR. LANIER: Your Honor, first of all under the Batson Challenge, they are the movants. And they have to – what the Supreme Court in Batson said, they have to make out a prima facie case of discrimination more – and, of course, the Supreme Court said, “Striking all blacks resulting in an all-white jury, the Supreme Court did not find as a matter of law that a prima facie case had been made by Batson. Rather, there has [1354] to be something else. So they are the movant, and I will – they have the burden of proof.

MR. WYATT: No, sir. We contend that the prima facie case has been made. The State had four blacks to choose from. They have ten strikes. Out of forty-two jurors, that is an average of less than one out of four on the average that they should use on any particular juror. They used all four on black jurors. Batson states that the practice violates their [sic] protection clause of the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution.

In his concurrent opinion, Justice Marshall indicates that the pernacious [sic] nature of the racial discriminatory use of peremptory challenge is repugnant to the Equal Protection clause. We have made a prima facie showing by the mere fact there are no blacks on the jury despite the State having an opportunity to keep four blacks.

We also contend there is no independent reason to strike Eddie Hood. Eddie Hood reads the Rome News-Tribune daily and knew about the escape, but some twenty-nine of the forty-two jurors read the Rome News-Tribune daily. We do not see how knowledge of the escape hurts the State's case. He did not know any of the defense witnesses or the defendant's family, [1355] and he did not know the victim's family. We contend that there is no showing at all that Eddie Hood other than race itself –

I will now go further into Batson, and they say, "The prosecutor" – on page 1723 – "Once the defendant makes a prima facie showing, the burden then shifts to the State to come forth with a neutral explanation for challenging black jurors. Though this requirement imposes the limitations in some cases on the [sic] full peremptory character of the historic challenge" –

THE COURT: Now don't get too fast.

MR. WYATT: Yes, sir. " – we emphasize the prosecution's explanation need not rise to the level justified in exercise for cause." But then it goes further, "But the prosecutor may not rebut the defendant's prima facie case of discrimination by stating merely that he challenged jurors in defendant's race on the assumption or his intuitive judgment that they would be partial to the defendant because of their shared race."

We go to page 1721, and Batson doesn't even talk about total discrimination; it also talks about seriously disproportionate exclusion of Negroes in the jury venires. But we don't even have seriously [1356] disproportionate in this case. We have total, 100 percent, discrimination by the State and using its four challenges to challenge every black juror in this case. That is repugnant to the Equal Protection Clause as the Batson v. Kentucky decision states.

Going to the other black jurors, Mary Turner – Evelyn Hardge, first of all, did know the defendant's mother, had met her in the hallway, but she did not know any of the State's witnesses.

Mary Turner did not – I believe my recollection is right – did not know the defendant's family, but did know some of the – perhaps somebody involved in he [sic] case, but did not know the family at all.

Then the other black juror was Marilyn Garrett who did not know the defendant or his family and who only read the paper on Sundays and knew very little about the case. We contend that the State can absolutely not come up with any sort of explanation for excluding allfour [sic] blacks. We at this time interpose as strong an objection as we can from this case and this selection of the jury in this case.

THE COURT: All right. According to the Court's understanding of the Batson decision, the burden now shifts to you, Mr. Lanier.

[1357] MR. LANIER: According to the Batson decision, again it says, "The mere striking of all blacks in a particular jury is not in and of itself making out a prima facie case. There has to be something else." The mere fact that the State uses its peremptory challenges to challenge all blacks in a particular jury, then that is not of itself made a prima facie case. In fact, under Batson, it says, "The defendant is not entitled to a jury composed in whole or in part of persons of his own race; however, the prosecutor is entitled to exercise permitted peremptory challenges for any reason at all as long as that reason is related to his view of the outcome of the case."

Your Honor, the State, in Batson v. Kentucky, that was an armed robbery, and the prosecutor excused three of the – of all of the black jurors in that particular case on an armed robbery case of a convenience store. In this case, we have a death penalty, and I want to state for the record that when I look at a death penalty, I look for more reasons than race. Race is not a factor. Age of the person is a factor of the witness – of the juror. The gender, female or male, the religious preference is something I always look at. When I [1358] strike a jury, I look at those combinations. As we contend – as has been shown by the number of people that were excused, generally in my experience having prosecuted [sic] five – well, this is my fifth death penalty case, women appear to be more sympathetic to jurors (sic) in a death penalty case than men. As indicative of the strikes that I used on my ten, I struck eight women. Eighty percent of my strikes were women.

Of the thirteen people that were excused by the Court for cause, because of their views on the death penalty, nine were women. So again, eighty percent to eighty-five percent of the people that were opposed to the death penalty that were excused for cause were women.

The second thing, men appear to be – in my opinion – to be more death penalty advocates than women. That has been borne out by the number of excusals under the death penalty. That has been born [sic] out by my strikes that I use. Again, in the forty-one cases that were excused for cause, and it is now forty-two due to Ms. Powell, the forty-two cases that were excused for cause and by agreement, thirty of them were women. Again, that is more than – sixty, seventy percent were women, and twelve men.

[1359] Women have a tendency in a case of this nature where the death penalty is being sought – they have serious reservations, time conflicts or whatever it may be, but that is what I look at when I am trying a death penalty case, and it is borne out by the fact of the excusals and agreements, that over seventy-five percent because of death penalty and other excuses were women who got off the jury panel.

In a case of this nature, when I am looking at the facts of this particular case, I look at the age of the victim, and I look at the age of the defendant. The defendant is nineteen years old now. The age of the victim was approaching eighty years. If you will recall, Your Honor, we had eleven blacks that were coming to this courtroom on April 20th, eleven.

Mr. Hood, a Mrs. Wilson, who was excused for cause. She was sixty-eight years old. Mr. Hood is forty-seven years old. Mrs. Wilson was sixty-eight years old, excused for cause. Mr. Hine was sixty-five years old and excused for cause. Again, these are sixty-eight and sixty-five years old, and I was looking for older, preferably living alone or retired, stable background, long-term [1360] community ties.

Mrs. Wilson was excused for cause. She was sixty-eight years old. Mr. Hines was excused for cause. He was sixty-five years old. Mr. Hardge, during the process, got a medical excuse, and he was excused by the Court. He was sixty-nine years old. Mr. Johnson, fifty-six years old. Ms. Turner was thirty-two. Wofford, excused for cause, was sixty-four years old. Powell, who has just been excused, was twenty-five. Garrett, was thirty-five. Mrs. Taylor, at the beginning of Court when we called the jurors on April 20th, she came up, and the Court excused her because of medical reasons. She was seventy-three. Brand was excused for medical reasons, and he was sixty-one.

One thing I failed to mention about Ms. Johnson, Juror No. 28, she didn't even show. I don't know why Ms. Johnson didn't show. There was no explanation given, and the sheriff was directed to go out and contact her. But of the eleven black jurors that were put upon the State, only four were left. So in other words, seven potential jurors had been excused for various reasons. Our position, the death penalty, age, medical reasons and familiarity with the defendant.

[1361] So that left me with four. Now with respect to Mr. Hood, I saw no problem with his age. He was exactly what I was looking for in terms of the age, between forty and fifty, good employment and married. The only thing that I was concerned about, and I will state it for the record. He has an eighteen year old son which is about the same year old as the defendant.

In my experience in prosecuting over twenty-five murder cases, I have had several cases where individuals having the same son (sic) as the defendant who is charged with murder has serious reservations and are more sympathetic and lean toward that particular person.

It is ironic that his son, and I don't know which son it is – Darrell Hood has been sentenced by my court, by the Court here, to theft by taking on April 4th, 1982.

THE COURT: That is his son?

MR. LANIER: That is Darrell Hood who resides at 13 Copeland Street, his same address. And he does say on his questionnaire that he has three boys ages 26, 22 and 18. There is a Darrell Hood that we have a conviction on that resides at that address, 13 Copeland Street, who was sentenced on April 12th, [1362] 1982, twelve months suspended sentence for theft by taking. Again, theft by taking is basically the same thing that this defendant is charged with.

Mr. Hood's wife also worked at Northwest Regional. All of my cases that I have excused are people that have worked at Northwest Regional, because again, insanity is a defense in this case. Northwest Regional deals a lot with mentally disturbed, mentally ill people, and I did not want anybody from Northwest Georgia Regional. My experience in the past where insanity cases are involved that they intend to be more sympathetic and are for the underdog.

The juror himself questioned and asked to be off the jury. He said he had part-time commitments and other time commitments, and he wanted off. For no other reason than that, I could have excused him. But he asked and expressed a desire to be off.

During the course of the jury selection, as the Court will recall, he got food poisoning, and was hospitalized in the hospital. We were not sure exactly when and if he was going to be here. He did show up today, but for medical reasons obviously if somebody has a serious case of food poisoning and is hospitalized during jury selection, I was not sure of his medical – or health capability.

[1363] He appeared in answering to his questions confused, in my opinion, soft-spoken, slow in response to questions, and certainly was very, very confused about the use of the word “automatic” and “death penalty” and life imprisonment. He was definitely slow in responding to the death penalty questions. He even hesitated.

His answers were very ambiguous and more importantly to me, he had no eye contact. One of the things that concerned me, Your Honor, is religious preference of jurors. His religious preference is Church of Christ. There have been four other jurors that have been excused for cause by agreement that belong to the Church of Christ, Juror No. 35, 53 and 78.

Evidently, the question was not asked of him whether or not his church took a stand against the death penalty. He did not respond to that. His church took a stand against alcohol. But it is my experience that the Church of Christ definitely takes a stand against the death penalty.

He also said that his brother counsels people in drugs, his brother. That concerned me, the fact that he had a relative who did counsel people involving drugs. And again, that is the primary defense in [1364] this case.

One other question that bothered me about Mr. Hood is that the defense did not ask him a lot of questions. I mean they were – you know, spent twenty-seven to thirty minutes on every white juror that we had here. But I will be able to establish that the average time spent on the four remaining black jurors was about seven to eight minutes. The defense did not ask a lot of questions. They spent ten minutes on him and didn't ask him questions about insanity, his views on it, about his church relation to the death penalty, about his membership of any social or fraternal organizations, his knowledge of the victim -- did not ask him any questions involving his attitude on race or the attitude or the pressure of the community. He did not ask him any information on whether or not he knew somebody with an alcohol or drug problem. And again – or what his feelings about the race situation involving Murray v. Turner.

He didn't ask him any question about the age of the defendant in the death penalty case. You recall that they asked everyone [sic] of the jurors that question, but did not ask Mr. Hood. They did not ask him about his feelings about criminal responsibility [1365] involved in insanity, did not ask him about his feelings about Cocaine use, publicity or the community attitude or pressure.

Given the fact – again, he was exactly what I was looking for, because I think a crime of this nature transcends any racial bounds. I think people in the black community are just as offended about this as the whites. However, Mr. Hood was not asked all the right questions. He didn't answer all the right questions. He has a son about the same age, and he has another son – I don't know which age he is – but again, he has been convicted of theft by taking. All of those reasons are why I said and I struck Mr. Hood. Again, under Batson, I don't have to strike anybody that amounts to cause. All I have to do is have a race neutral reason, and all of these reasons that I have given the Court are racially neutral.

MR. WYATT: Well, in explaining race, he also has now shown his opposition to the female sex, gender discrimination in this case. If you exclude the two black women, the numbers come down on the number of strikes that he used. Some women that he mentioned were excused by cause at our request, Your Honor. So he now gets to the age – having an older child [1366] like Tim Foster. We have several people who were selected on the jury – had children who are about the defendant's age or a little older. Billy Graves has several children. Mr. Dedeurwaerder had five children. Mr. Haulk has children twenty-five and twenty-six years old. Mr. Hall, ages twenty-eight and twenty-three. That is not a – age of the defendant and that being the reason because Mr. Hood has an eighteen-year-old child – is not a reason.

Further as far as us only questioning black defendants (sic) seven or eight minutes, the State has had the same right to question potential jurors in any length that they want to. I did not sit down with a stop watch. I don't know who has for the record. But I believe the State inquired more into the black defendants than we did.

MR. LANIER: That is absolutely incorrect.

MR. WYATT: As I said, I did not keep a stop watch. But we contend there is nothing that has been shown in the State's explanation, and they do have the burden of proof now that it has switched to them that shows that the four strikes were nothing but based on race, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, the Court overrules the motion, and finds that Batson has been met. All right.

[1367] What is next?.

MR. LANIER: Ms. Hardge, H-a-r-d-g-e, Juror No. 22.

THE COURT: Well, I thought that we had covered the whole –

MR. LANIER: No, sir. I want to perfect the record on giving my reasons for the excusal of everyone of these jurors, because I think that five or ten years down the line I need to give a neutral explanation, and I have my explanations given and I want the Court to know my reasons for it.

With respect to Ms. Hardge, Juror No. 22, if you will recall, when she took the witness stand or took the stand, she admitted to the Court and to us that she had just talked to the defendant's mother outside the courtroom; however, she said that would not affect her. The fact that she did talk to the mother of the defendant concerns me. She was, in my opinion – she was seventy years old, but her answers were totally incoherent. She had a son, she said, that was twenty-three years old – again close to the age of the defendant.

She had always noted in her questionnaire that she had been dismissed from prior jury service. The defense asked no questions, did not ask her a [1368] single question; however, we spent thirty minutes on an average to every other juror.

MR. FINNELL: Your Honor, let me just interpose an objection with regard to what the defense asked. The defense can ask whatever it cares to or does not care to ask. The State has gone so far as to copy the defense's questionnaire. So the State had every opportunity to ask all those questions if they thought they were pertinent. We don't have the burden here. They do. I object to Mr. Lanier trying to shift what we do or do not do. The burden rests with him and not with us.

MR. LANIER: Again, she said at first she was opposed to the death penalty. But if facts warranted – she appeared confused – ambiguous answers. She was very slow to answer the death penalty questions. She stated several times she would automatically vote for the death penalty, would automatically vote for life. When asked about death penalty questions, she made the statement, "What is going to be will be." And then she said, "I will vote for life regardless of the evidence. I am against the death penalty, but despite my beliefs on death penalty, I could vote for it.” If death penalty could be avoided, like it that way.” Didn’t answer all the questions [1369] on the questionnaire, and the Court had to take the time to make her fill it out again. She answered Question No. 27 mistakenly. She wanted off jury duty, have to see about her husband who is a double amputee. She did not list church affiliation and wasn’t asked by the defendant anything about her religious beliefs. In my opinion, and its unfortunate – Mrs. Hardge is an extremely nice person – but she just did not answer the questions correctly. She appeared confused, very easily swayed, irrational, bewildered, incoherent. That is my concern about Mrs. Hardge. Mary Turner –

MR. WYATT: For the record, we have no response to his argument on Ms. Hardge.

MR. LANIER: Okay. On Mary Turner –

THE COURT: No response?

MR. WYATT: No response.

THE COURT: Well, I can rule on Ms. Hardge now. I feel that the State had ample reason to excuse her.

MR. LANIER: Yes, sir. On Mary Turner, again, she worked at Northwest Regional. Again, I did not want jurors who worked at Northwest Georgia Regional regardless of their capacity. She claims in Question No. 23 to be my investigator’s half-sister, Clayton [1370] Lundy’s step-sister.

THE COURT: Half-sister, she said.

MR. LANIER: Pardon?

THE COURT: Half-sister.

MR. LANIER: Half-sister. My investigator, who, is black, for the record said that she was not his half-sister. She appeared to me to be hostile to the Court and counsel when answering questions. She did not answer Question 32 correctly.

If you will recall, 32 is a question that says, "Do you have a close friend or relative who has been ever accused or convicted of a crime of violence?" She did not state in the record, but one of her step-brothers is Otis Turner. Otis Turner, Your Honor, if you will recall, is a repeat offender with this Court. In fact, he is on a particular drug charge right now. He has a lot of theft by taking and burglary charges, Otis Turner. When she did not answer the question posed by the defense, whether or not – she was asked whether or not she knew anybody with an alcohol or a drug problem, she said, "No."

Again, it is the position of the Court that she was being less than candid, because her half-brother is Otis Turner, who has been charged on [1371] five to seven different occasions with theft, burglary and drugs. My experience in that she said – her occupation is dispensing drugs throughout the State of Georgia, yet no one – she knows no one when asked the question about any drug problems. Again, she stated she didn't know anybody, and again, Otis

Turner who is charged in this court with Violation of the Georgia Controlled Substances Act – she said she didn't know anybody. That is inconceivable to the State.

She was more – in questioning, she was more courteous and pleasant to defense counsel when answering the questions, and she appeared hostile to the State's questions. She became very defensive.

The thing that concerned me most about Mrs. Turner was that she kept looking at the defendant when she was answering the questions, and she would not look at the State's counsel. She kept a constant eye contact with the defendant, and I looked at the defendant; and he kept a constant eye contact with her.

She appeared nervous when asked by the State regarding any question about the defendant. She hesitated very strongly when answering the death penalty question. She did not like answers to [1372] insanity – no, excuse me. I did not like her answers on the insanity questions as posed by the defense. She appeared confused at times, had to have questions repeated. Pictures made her sick, nervous stomach. Didn't like the question on race, "depends on person and where they come from." Now that was her answer.

Your Honor, it said – she said, "It depends on the person and where they come from." As the Court is well aware, the defense in this case is that the defendant is an underprivileged kid that because of his environment is the one that committed this act. That is their defense, mentally ill. So again, her answer, "Depends on the person and where they come from," that is the whole basis for the defense. That is one of the reasons why I struck Mary Turner.

Again, when answering questions on temporary insanity said no. She said that she would not believe in temporary insanity, and they made no motion to excuse her for cause like they did on Mrs. Barbogello. There were repeated questions by the defense concerning her views on temporary insanity. She said she didn't believe in it. Yet, they made no motion to excuse her for cause, just like they did on Mrs. [1373] Barbogello. So I felt that my opinion that they obviously did not want to pursue it further with her – and I struck her. With respect to Mrs. Garrett –

THE COURT: Well, I think he is wanting to answer as to Mrs. Turner.

MR. LANIER: Okay.

MR. WYATT: First of all, it is our choice whether to excuse Ms. Turner for cause. He didn't ask to excuse her for cause either at that point. Working at the TB Control Unit, I don't see what that has to do with knowledge of the insanity defense, Your Honor. But still somebody what the State has said on both him and Mr. Hood is that he wants somebody ignorant on our defenses. I don't know if that is a good reason. I don't know what statistics has been done on eye contact and who is great at eye contacts or whether eye contacts are on the record in this case. That is certainly an –

THE COURT: Anyway, in the interest of time, I think he has explained satisfactorily to the Court as to this last one – what is her name, Turner?

MR. LANIER: Yes. Mary Turner.

[1374] THE COURT: All right.

MR. LANIER: And with respect to the last juror, No. 86, this probably was the most potential witness – juror that I had. She was thirty-seven years old. The thing that concerned me about Mrs. Garrett, and again, when the – that is what is great about the State having – and the defense having voir dire. In some courts, the Court does the voir dire, and that leaves the attorneys out of that area. We have only about five or ten minutes to judge a person how they would vote in a case, by the way they look, by the questions that are posed, answers given and about how they appear in Court. I looked at her, and she would not look at the Court during the voir dire, kept looking at the ground.

Again, that to me, concerned me. Her answers were very short, if the Court will recall. In fact, Doug Pullen put down in his notes, “Almost curt and impudent. Said yeah to the Court on four occasions. Shows a complete disrespect for the Court and its authority.” She appeared very shaky, very nervous. Her voice quivered. Not a very strong juror. She, in my opinion, was too young. She was thirty-four years old. She said she was not familiar with the North Rome area, and unfortunately, [1375] in her questionnaire, she grew up – she went to Main Elementary or Main School, which is again two blocks from where this crime happened. She said – and yet she drives by the North Rome area every day from Morton Bend Road when she goes to work. She is divorced. Again, I was looking for stability. She has two jobs working seventy-eight hours a week and has two children, and yet she didn't ask off for any reason because of sequestration, with two jobs and two children didn't ask off.

The defense did not ask her questions about race, about integrated schools, about feelings about integration, about criminal responsibility, insanity, temporary or what, against alcohol, no questions – not much questions on publicity and no questions on pressure or attitude.

The thing that bothered me probably the most about this case and about this juror, and I would have taken her except for this one thing, her association and involvement in Head Start. Again, Head Start deals with low income, underprivileged children. From what I understand from the defense, that this is the central issue in their defense, that this defendant came from a low income underprivileged, disadvantaged youth, which caused what happened [1376] to Ms. White. Again, her affiliation, her relationship with Head Start and her age being so close to the defendant, and all the above questions caused me the greatest concern about Ms. Marilyn Garrett. So I then chose to use my last – one of my peremptory strikes on her.

I again emphasize to the Court that eighty percent of my strikes were women. Unfortunately, three of the four blacks were women, and I – do you remember Tim Pape who is now a judge, – when the defense said I am now against women; I am not. I look for the cause of the case, which is the death penalty. Right from the very start in this case – right from the very start, we have been striking a jury for the death penalty. If the Court is aware – I am sure the Court is – there have been offers of pleas in this case. We are not here, and I am not here for the guilt/innocence case. I think we have a jury, and any one of those jurors would have been good for the guilt/innocence. I am looking at this case primarily for the death penalty, and despite the offers of pleas, I am going for the death penalty in this case. So my whole objective in striking eighty percent women and two men were their views on death penalty and their [1377] relationship to their environment and the defendant. That is my whole purpose, certainly race neutral. Thank you.

MR. WYATT: Just one comment on that. Now he has gone from “I am not striking them because they are black, because they can identify with low income people.” I don’t think we need statistics to show that most blacks are on the lower economic level of society in this town, Your Honor.

We contend – he said that was his main purpose because she had worked with Head Start. We contend that is absolutely no reason to strike her.

THE COURT: Well, the Court is satisfied that Batson has been satisfied. The motion is overruled.

MR. FINNELL: Your Honor, I would like to make one addition on the record, and afterwards, the Court might want to direct an inquiry about it.

THE COURT: Do what?

MR. FINNELL: I would like to make an observation on the record concerning this, and the Court might want a follow-up inquiry into it by the State. That is, I am extremely impressed with the preparation that the State has done with regard to this Batson hearing. I am wondering – I am very curious, Your Honor, the statistics, the knowledge, everything [1378] that Mr. Lanier had laid out, I don't think he did it this morning. I think it was pre-planned, and I think, Your Honor, that the Court might want to inquire as to the State as to whether or not they have done this with every juror, if they could give statistics like that in relationship to any other juror other than the four blacks. I almost bet they can't. If they can't, Your Honor, that shows that they arranged this entire stage. They did all these statistics in evidence just so they could justify their discrimination. Now if Mr. Lanier has that kind of background statistical data that he did on every juror, then I will be silent. But I have got a feeling that it was just done on those four to five potential black jurors. If it was, Your Honor, then that showed that up there in the district attorney's office, they were up there saying, "Okay, guys, how are we going to have to justify striking these black jurors? Well, let's start pulling out the statistics on each one and comparing them to the pool as a whole, and then we will put that on the record. And when we do, then we can say we are race neutral."

But if those acts took place, Your Honor, and if they don't have that on every juror, then I would [1379] suggest to the Court that that would be evidence of purposeful discrimination on behalf of the State.

MR. LANIER: I want to make the observation, your Honor, – of course, defense counsel has obviously not read Batson v. Kentucky. Batson v. Kentucky does not require the State to list any reasons for their excusals, peremptory or otherwise of any white juror. But the thing that concerns me is that we made out of the four jurors, the black jurors, we made motions to excuse two of them for cause, and, of course, they were rehabilitated; and they remained in the jury pool.

There is a thing that also concerns me about this particular – about what the defense counsel is saying – as I told the defense counsel, and I told this Court, this crime crosses race boundaries. This crime offends black community just as much as it does white. I am sorry that I had to have – pick from eleven potential jurors, I only had to have four to pick from. By process of attrition, seven of them have left us through medical, death penalty and otherwise.

I resent the implication, and I think Justice Rheinquest [sic] in the decision in Batson v. Kentucky said it perfectly well. “This Batson decision [1380] makes the prosecutor have to state on the record, and I don’t like stating on the record anymore than anybody else my reasons for excusing potential jurors. I look at it color-blind. I have my reasons for excusing the white jurors just as well. But under Batson v. Kentucky, I don’t have to give them.

THE COURT: Well, the Court has made its ruling, and the ruling shall stand.

CASE NO.
86-2218-2

TIMOTHY TYRONE FOSTER

MOTION FOR POST-JUDGMENT DISCOVERY

(Filed Sep. 14, 1987)

COMES NOW the Defendant and pursuant to Brady v Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (83 SC 1194, 10 LE 2D 215 (1963); Batson v Kentucky, 476 U.S. ___, (106 SC 1712, 90 LE 2D 69) (1986); and Gamble v State, 257 GA 325 (July 9, 1987) brings this Motion and in Support of this Motion he shows this Court as follows.

1.

That prior to the trial of this case a Motion For Discovery was filed by the Defendant and said Motion covered post judgment proceedings.

2.

That the State in this case during the Batson hearing read notes that indicated Marilyn Garrett was “almost curt and impertinent.” Further, the State also noted that Marilyn Garrett said yeah four times, showing a complete disregard for the Court and its authorities. The record of this case indicates that several jurors said yeah and uh-huh more that [sic] four times.

3.

During the Batson hearing the State argued to this Court that Batson v Kentucky does not require the State to list any reasons for their excuses, preemptory or otherwise, of any white juror. However, Gamble v State 257 GA 325, 327 clearly indicates that the prosecution's explanation offered for striking each black juror must be evaluated in light of the explanation offered for the prosecution's other preemptory challenges.

In this case the State made it clear on April 20, 1987 during the Batson hearing that it did not have to justify its strikes of white prospective jurors, and that it did not evaluate its strikes of black jurors in light of its strikes of white jurors.

5.

The State in its Brief In Response to Defendant's Batson argument for an [sic] new Trial referred to its notes on several occasions as justification for striking black jurors or keeping or striking white jurors. Without admitting the veracity, admissibility, or weight of those notes, Defendant claims that if the State uses part of its notes to justify its exclusion of black jurors in this case, then all of the notes should be available to this Court and other Courts which examines the intent of the State.

Defendant contends that a review of the notes of State in this will likely reveal that the State conducted a more intensive investigation of the black jurors than of the white jurors and that the purpose of said investigation was to find reasons to exclude black jurors.

WHEREFORE, Defendant prays that this Court impanel all notes and records regarding jury selection in the possession of the State. That this Court conduct an in camera inspection of those notes and records and that the notes and records be sealed and deposited in the registry of this Court where they will be available for appellate review and/or post conviction relief if that be necessary.

ARGUMENT IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR POST JUDGMENT DISCUSSION

(Filed Sep. 14, 1987)

Batson v Kentucky, 476 U.S. ___, (106 S.C. 1712, 90 LE 2D 69) (1986) clearly establishes that when there is a black defendant on trial and an all-white jury is selected to try that black defendant, then the intent of the State in striking the black jurors is at issue and the State must prove that its intentions were race neutral in excluding those black jurors. The burden of proof is on the state.

The intention of the State is critical in this case. If the State meets its burden of proof, then the death penalty could remain. If the State fails to meet its burden of proof then the Defendant receives a New Trial. The Defendant is entitled pursuant to Brady v Maryland, 373 US 83 (83 SC 1194, 10 LE 2D 215) (1963) to all exculpatory information in possession of the State and Defendant makes the obvious observation that if the notes and records of the State indicate a discriminatory intention by the State, then Defendant is entitled to have the Court aware of that intention.

Further, the State has referred to its Notes and Records on several occasions during both oral and in written arguments in justifying its strikes of blacks. Without admitting the veracity, weight, or admissibility of these notes, the Defendant claims that all of the State's notes now should be made a part of the record in this case and should be available for review by this Court and by all other Courts that will examine the intent of the State in excluding all of the potential black jurors in this case.

CASE NO.

TIMOTHY TYRONE FOSTER

ORDER ON MOTION FOR POST-JUDGMENT DISCOVERY

(Filed Nov. 16, 1987)

THIS MATTER came before this Court by motion filed by the Defendant, through counsel. Having considered the motion and authority cited by Defendant, the Court denies his request that the Court impanel all notes and records which the State has concerning jury selection, that the Court conduct an in camera inspection of those notes and records, and that those notes and records be sealed and deposited for appellate review.

The Defendant cites in support of his motion Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S.C. 1194 (1963). Defendant's reliance is misplaced. On appeal from a death sentence, the defendant Brady challenged the withholding of a confession by his companion that the companion had committed the actual murder for which both had been tried and found guilty. Although Brady's attorney conceded that his client was guilty of murder in the first degree, he believed that knowledge by the jury of whom actually did the killing would induce them to render his client a life sentence, rather than a death sentence. In that case, the United States Supreme Court held that “the suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused upon request violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to punishment, irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution.” Id. at 87, 83 S.C. at 1196.

There is no question that the Court meant evidence concerning such things as whether a crime was in fact committed, whether the defendant tried is the one responsible for said crime, and whether some fact exists which a jury might find to mitigate the punishment otherwise called for. The focus is clearly upon the action or inaction of the defendant, not of the prosecutor, and upon the information available to a jury to determine its verdict and sentence. The only role the prosecutor has under Brady v. Maryland is to provide information concerning guilt or innocence of a defendant to a defendant, or to provide information touching upon what punishment would be appropriate for a given defendant. Both are types of evidence which would be given to a jury to consider.

The defense refers to its entitlement to “exculpatory information” under Brady. The Court agrees. However, it declines to render the word “exculpate” a term of art, thereby divorcing it from the layman’s understanding of its meaning: to clear from alleged fault or guilt. Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary 443 (1983). Regardless of the State’s motives in striking black jurors, nothing found in its notes concerning jury selection will tend to clear the Defendant in this case from alleged fault or guilt.

Further, the Georgia criminal discovery statutes, O.C.G.A. sections 17-7-210 and 17-7-211 provide no basis for the Defendant's motion.

In addition, it is noted that the material sought by the Defendant to be impaneled is such as would fall under the work product doctrine. The highest court of the land has declared that this doctrine applies in criminal as well as civil cases. United States v. Nobles, 422 U.S. 225, 236, 95 S.C. 2160, 2169 (1975).

Wherefore, for the foregoing reasons, this Court denies Defendant's motion for post-judgment discovery.

So ordered this 16th day of November, 1987.

THE STATE OF GEORGIA	:
	:	No. 86-2218-2,
VERSUS	:
	:	Motion For
TIMOTHY TYRONE FOSTER,	:	New Trial
Defendant	:

APPEARANCES:

FOR THE STATE:

Stephen F. Lanier, Esq., Rome, Georgia

FOR THE DEFENDANT:

James C. Wyatt, III, Esq., Rome, Georgia

November 24, 1987, Rome, Georgia

BE IT REMEMBERED, the above-entitled motion came on for hearing on this date before the HON. JOHN A. FRAZIER, JR., Judge of said Court, when all parties announced ready.

The following proceedings were had and evidence introduced, to wit:

Motion for new trial.

* * *

[2] THE COURT: Be seated. Where is the defendant?

MR. LANIER: He's not required to be at these motions for new trial.

THE COURT: Are you sure?

MR. LANIER: Yes, sir.

THE COURT: All right. Let's go.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, we call Steve Lanier. The defense would call Steve Lanier to the stand.

MR. LANIER: We would like to know for what purpose the defense is subpoenaing – not subpoenaing, but calling myself to the stand. I've already filed an affidavit with the Court stating my reasons during the jury selection, and he has served me with a subpoena last week; and I would like to know what his proffer would be.

MR. WYATT: First of all, our proffer would be, Judge, we – let me just explain. The Batson case indicates that if the defendant establishes a prima facie case of racial exclusion or discrimination, then the burden falls on the State to prove that the discrimination and the exclusion of blacks was for a non-racial reason. It was not race related.

There are several statements in the Batson case, which I would like to quote to the Court [3] now. At page 1721, the Batson Court said, "In deciding if the defendant has carried his burden of persuasion, a Court must undertake a sensitive inquiry into such circumstantial and direct evidence of intent as may be available.”

At page 1722, “When circumstances suggest the need, the trial court must undertake a factual inquiry that takes into account all possible explanatory factors in that particular case.”

Page 1724, “By requiring trial courts to be sensitive to racially discriminatory use of peremptory challenges, our decision enforces the mandate of equal protection and furthers the ends of justice.”

The State in this case has consistently read from its notes. The State has given an in-depth analysis of its jury selection process. The State has made statements about its intent. We have asked for an in camera inspection in this case, which we think would have avoided this cross examination. The in camera inspection was denied. We ask that we cross examination the State on the following areas: First, on religion as a criteria. Secondly, whether or not the State used, what I call uncomplimentary terms in describing white [4] jurors. The State used terms such as “rude, hostile, slow” to describe – and almost pertinent, impertinent terms like that to describe the black group. We would like to ask for a cross examination to see if that criteria was used on white jurors also, such as subjective criteria, and we believe the Gamble case indicates that the examination of the black strikes must be made in light of the examination of the white strikes, which the State used also.

We also intend to go into a case five years ago, the State versus Ronnie Duck. In that case there was a hung jury. One juror held up. That juror, we expect to show, was a black juror. We expect to offer evidence that this district attorney made certain comments about the juror; about whether or not that juror should be prosecuted. He complimented the white jurors, and did not compliment the black juror in that case. And we ask to go into those areas, because we think they are pertinent and go to the heart. The only issue in the Batson case is the intent of the State. Thank you.

MR. LANIER: Your Honor, if you will recall when – if the defense wants to look – the defense [5] requested through their Brady motion or post-Brady motion to look at our notes. In conference, we offered our notes to the Court if provided the defendant would provide his notes as well, and the Court could look at both the State's and the defense's notes to look and see if any derogatory terms were applied to each particular juror. Obviously, the defense has seen fit not to do so. The Court has already ruled on its post-Brady motion, and properly denied such.

I think to require the State prosecutor to get up on the stand and explain what he said derogatory toward any other jurors, obviously, I think is improper. We will let you look at our notes provided the defense would let the Court look at his notes, and the Court would have access to all of those notes and look at all the terms that were used. If you will recall in that in camera or closed session, not in camera session with the Court, you know, we – you know, the defense was equally concerned because they used terminology as to certain particular jurors like we used terminology as to certain particular jurors. I don't think it's proper for the defense to require the State to get up on the stand, use the district [6] attorney to say what derogatory terms he used for other jurors that were not selected in this case.

I think I've read Batson twenty-five times, and I've read all of the cases involving Batson. At no time does Batson or any other case require the State to explain its acceptances of those people who did not eventually serve on the jury. The only time Batson and Gamble state is that the State is required to explain his challenges for the three, four blacks in the Foster case, in the Batson case, the four blacks. In all the cases, it says, "explains his challenges, his strikes". For the defense to require the State to explain his 32 acceptances and any derogatory terms involving the 32 acceptances, I don't think any case that I've read, both State and Federal, require us to do so.

The sole issue is the exclusion of these blacks who were put upon us during jury selection, and in relationship to the other strikes, "challenges" as it says in Gamble v State that the State used as applied to the other whites. Challenges, strikes, not acceptances, and so to require us to go into that, I think is improper. I think to require the State to go into a case that happened [7] in 1981, which was six years ago, and in the jury selection, I think is also improper.

The defense made – had an even opportunity – had more than ample opportunity to raise this issue prior to the selection of the jury in the Foster case. It obviously knew about this case in 1981. It said in one of its motions that the State had used historically – had historically used strikes against black defendants. It cannot – you know, the Duck case has absolutely no bearing to this particular case which happened six years ago (sic). So I would object, just on the record.

I think under Batson, Your Honor, there are three stages – four stages. First of all, they have to make a prima facia [sic] showing that the State intentionally discriminated in the selection of its excusal of a black juror. The second stage, if they pass that burden, the Court makes a ruling that they have made a prima facia [sic] case. It goes into the third that the State offers neutral, legitimate, non-racial, specific explanations – offers. And then the fourth and final stage, the Court evaluates the responses along with the allegations and reaches a decision. And in this case, you know, there is no case that – even Batson or [8] any other case that we've looked at that requires the prosecutor to take the stand. If the defense counsel has a case which requires the prosecutor to take the stand, I'd like to know about it.

THE COURT: Well, I would also.

MR. WYATT: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor. I would like to make just a couple of comments.

Batson requires more than an offer to the State or even a statement by the State if such an explanation is a racial issue. It requires that the State meets the burden of proof in showing that its reasons were –

MR. PULLEN: I'm sorry. I can't hear.

THE COURT: You're getting lower and lower and lower, and you're getting farther and farther and farther away from the mike.

MR. WYATT: Batson requires that the State meet the burden of proof. The burden of proof is on the State to show that the total of serious disproportionment and exclusion of blacks is race neutral. We contend there's no other way to check into the burden of proof except to have a thorough cross examination of the State.

Justice White in the Batson decision said that the contrary to Batson will be determined [9] later, and it will require much litigation. Batson is new law, and I guess the Court, defense attorney and the State, nobody really knows where it's going; but we contend that this is one area that Batson will go in, and we ask to open that area right now, cross examination of the State. Our motive is not at issue. There are no Batson cases that say that the defense's motive used in strikes is an issue. I will state that – also the State says that we're looking at whether or not they used derogatory terms in the use of white jurors, and it is our expectation, if we cross examine the State, we will show a lack of derogatory terms for the white jurors – the type of derogatory terms that were used for the black jurors.

THE COURT: Well, at this time, I know of no law that would give you the right and opportunity for putting the district attorney on the stand and cross examining him; so I am denying that motion.

MR. WYATT: Yes, sir. Your Honor, we have nothing further to offer as evidence.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, excuse me. If questions that he might have that might be proper were propounded on an individual basis, that the [10] record might need some explaining on that sole issue, that is our objection. We feel like that since this is the last opportunity to complete the record before we go up, there are some things that are not in the record, that we would like to put in the record before we close, if he's through; but our specific objection is him trying to expand the Batson decision.

We don't know of any case which requires us to be put up. If there are questions that he has that the Court might share, we have no objection to him propounding those questions to the Court, and the Court directing them to us; so that we could have a complete record. But we don't think it's proper or professional to have a defense counsel to place a lawyer on the witness stand and cross examine him on something, particularly, in this case, since (1.) Our reasons were stated originally at trial. (2.) They have been restated since then in pleadings. Now if he has something to disprove that, or anything of that nature – he mentioned one thing, I think, going about religion or something. If the Court feel that's a proper question, then we don't mind answering that question; but to get up and start talking [11] about derogatory terms and that kind of thing, I don't think there's any evidence at this point that any of those terms have been used. Terms have been used that somebody might not appreciate, but you feel like they're not derogatory terms, but terms that describe that juror.

THE COURT: Let me ask a question. Is it not a violation of the Code of Professional Conduct of Lawyers to put another lawyer on the stand? I remember something about that. Not having been covered by that in a number of years, I probably have not kept up with it, but there's something in there about lawyers taking the witness stand.

MR. LANIER: Your Honor, something about lawyers subpoenaing other lawyers that are parties in the case that are representing or counsel in the case as to witnesses, but I don't know the specific canon that you're referring to; but I know of a prohibition of attorneys taking the stand. I think one of the cases that we cited — not cited, but one of the cases is Arkansas. It's an Arkansas case. It's a 1978 case. It says, "When a prosecutor states something on the record to the court, he is considered an officer of the court; and he is not required to be placed under [12] oath." That's my, I think, my objection. You know, our situation is, requiring me to take the stand and be placed under oath — I stated my reasons. I stated them in open court, and I filed an affidavit; and I'm an officer of the court, and I stated my reasons. We feel like they were legitimate, specific and non-racial and related to the case to be tried. My objection, for the defense to require me to take the stand and then be placed under oath and then inquired upon about a case that happened six years ago and about other derogatory terms used on other jurors that were not even selected in this particular case was my objection.

I know, and I think our situation – we do want to perfect the record on certain things, and, you know, out of an abundance of caution, Judge, I think basically – I know that the Supreme Court of Georgia and probably the 11th Circuit might feel differently about the Court's ruling. Despite the Court denying the motion, I would like to voluntarily take the stand and be subject to cross examination by the defense, but I want it within the guidelines of Batson; and I don't think that, (1.) The defense should be allowed to [13] look at my notes, because the Court has already ruled on that issue. But he wants me to refer to my notes, and I think that's what he's trying to get to my notes by taking me – putting me on the stand and cross examining me and putting derogatory terms of other witnesses; and I think also, under the purview of Batson and everything about taking the stand and being cross examined with respect to a case that happened seven years ago – six years ago, I don't think is relevant to what happened in the jury selection at issue. But I think with the Court's ruling, and I'm trying to get some direction here, because I know that I don't want this case remanded because of an inability or failure for this sensitive inquiry. But I just would like, if I take the stand, I would like for defense counsel to be put on notice that I don't want him to have access to my file. I don't think it's proper to have to put into evidence derogatory terms toward other jurors that weren't selected in this case, and also about the Duck case that happened seven years ago. I don't think that's proper, but I think we ought to – I ought to take the stand and let him ask questions; and we ought to be allowed to object on a question-[14]by-question basis, and let the Court make its ruling at that time.

THE COURT: All right, if you're wanting to do that.

MR. LANIER: All right.

STEPHEN LANIER

THE CLERK: You do solemnly swear that the testimony you give to the Court on this issue and motion hearing between the State of Georgia and Timothy Tyrone Foster who is charged with murder, shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

MR. LANIER: I do.

THE CLERK: Thank you.

THE COURT: I think that oath might should have read, "who has been convicted of murder."

MR. LANIER: Right.

THE COURT: Instead of, "who is charged with –."

THE CLERK: Okay.

CROSS EXAMINATION

BY MR. WYATT:

Q Okay. You're Steve Lanier, is that correct?

[15] A That's correct.

Q You're the district attorney?

THE COURT: Now, Mr. Wyatt, talk loud enough where the gentleman over there can hear you. But you get farther away from that, and you get lower and lower.

Q You are the district attorney here in Floyd County?

A That's correct.

Q And as district attorney, you did try the Timothy Tyrone Foster capital murder case?

A That's correct.

Q And you were assisted full time by Doug Pullen, who is an assistant district attorney?

A That's correct.

Q From Columbus, Georgia?

A That's correct.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, with the Court's permission, I'm going to become a juror.

THE COURT: You're going to have to, because he's like the witnesses that I fuss at all the time. You can't hear him.

Q As part of trying this case, both you and Mr. Pullen conducted the voir dire – jury voir dire in this case?

[16] A That's correct.

Q I believe it was about a four-day process from April 24th through April the 27th. Is that correct?

A I know that it went five days, Monday through Friday, and then broke for the weekend, and reconvened on Monday morning for the selection of the jury.

Q Okay. Did anybody else in your office assist full time on the jury selection process?

A Mr. Lundy did, Clayton Lundy.

Q Clayton Lundy?

A Right.

Q So he was involved in all aspects of it too?

A That's correct. Clayton Lundy is my chief investigator, who is black.

Q And over the weekend, between April 24th and April 27th, y'all did select your strikes and keeps during that weekend. Is that correct?

A We had all possibilities, but we looked at the negatives and the questionables; and we did make a determination as to who we would select, or who we would strike on Monday morning.

Q I believe you began with – there were 40 – there were a total of about 52 jurors questioned. Is that –

A Yeah, I don't recall how many were questioned.

[17] Q And out of that, the first 42 was to be the panel which the twelve jurors were selected?

A That's correct.

Q The next eight, the two alternates; and then we had two or three for safety's sake in case any of them fell through over the weekend?

A That's correct.

Q In selecting the 42 jurors, I take it it's the State – the prosecution's strategy to decide the 10 strikes. Is that correct, to decide 10 strikes and 32 keeps?

A To exclude or to cull ten people that we felt we would be an unfavorable juror in this case.

Q Okay, and since the State does go first in the jury selection, it goes before the defense, you pretty well have to decide your ten strikes and stick by them. Is that correct?

A We have – we tell you that it's a game of chess. A lot of times we accept people knowing full well that the defense is going to strike. It's – we – the ten people that we felt very uncomfortable with, we have to know up front.

Q And you have to pretty well select the ten specific people who you intend to strike?

A That is correct.

[18] Q Okay. Let me ask you, was religion – is religion a factor to you – religion of the juror, in deciding whether or not a juror – to keep or strike a juror in a death penalty case?

A It is.

Q Okay. Could you just describe how religion is a factor to you?

A Well, being a preacher's son, of course, I'm – being a Baptist preacher's son, religious – the Baptist religion that I know of does not take a stand against capital punishment. In talking with several people I know, and experience in the death penalty cases I've tried, the Roman Catholic Church takes a stand, not against death penalty, but that the life is precious, and this was, obviously, evidenced by three to four people being excused because they were Roman Catholics. And I think the Catholic church does take – I don't know that they take a stand, but I do look at them very closely when I'm looking at a death penalty case. In a guilt/innocence case, I have no problems with Roman Catholics.

The Church of Christ, in talking with Doug Pullen, who's tried some 17 to 18 death penalty cases, the Church of Christ people, while they may not take a formal stand against the death penalty, they are very, very reluctant to vote for the death penalty. Mr. Pullen, of course, will [19] state on the record his experiences with the Church of Christ at a later point in time in our hearing, but it was his concern, which was shared by myself, that Church of Christ people are reluctant or would not vote for the death penalty. This is also evidenced by the fact that two or maybe three, I can't recall how many of the Church of Christ jurors, who were white, were excused for cause because of death penalty reservations.

Q Is there any particular religious groups that you find are very much pro-death penalty?

MR. PULLEN: Excuse me, Your Honor. Pro-death penalty has nothing to do with why certain jurors were struck in this particular case, unless he can demonstrate that those jurors were of that group. We have had no objection, up until this point, because it is a part of our race-neutral reasons, but we feel like he's exceeding those bounds now.

THE COURT: What was the question again?

MR. WYATT: I asked him if he found if any religious groups tended to be pro-death penalty.

THE COURT: I sustain the objection.

Q Well, let's go ahead and get to the individual jurors. You did, in fact, strike Eddie Hood, who was Church of Christ. Is that correct?

A That's correct.

[20] Q And you stated in your arguments that you struck Mary Hackett partly because she was Roman Catholic?

A That is correct.

THE COURT: Now wait a minute. Who?

MR. WYATT: Mary Hackett, Your Honor.

Q And that you struck George McMahon partly because he was Roman Catholic. Is that correct?

A Well, primarily because of his reservations against the death penalty, which was, in my opinion, Catholic related.

Q But also you did mention in your argument that his association with the Roman Catholic Church was one of the reasons?

A That's correct.

A And I believe you stated in your brief that you kept Arlene Blackman, this is on page 7, even though she has been associated with the Roman Catholic Church. Is that correct?

A That's correct. Even though I looked at her association with the Roman Catholic Church, and I liked her answers as to the death penalty, which I did not like the answers of Mr. Hood or Mr. McMahon; and also, she attends church on an irregular basis, which having been brought up in the church, knowing full well what an irregular basis meant. I felt like her association with [21] the Roman Catholic Church would not hinder her or prevent her from reaching a death penalty in this case. Obviously, with the verdict, we were correct in our assumption.

Q Evelyn Hardge, a Methodist Episcopal, did that – was religion any factor in striking her?

A No, religion wasn't a factor with Evelyn.

Q Okay. Two of the potential jurors were Holiness, Mary Turner and Shirley Powell, who was one of the 42 jurors empaneled after – she was excused for cause on Monday morning, April the 27th, and I believe you stated on the record you intended to strike Shirley Powell. Is that correct?

MR. PULLEN: Excuse me, Your Honor. What we had intended to do does not –

THE COURT: That doesn't enter into it. I sustain that objection.

MR. WYATT: Judge, if I can respectfully [sic] disagree. What their intent is is an issue at this point.

MR. PULLEN: Our intent on these jurors that were removed that he has variously claimed and then not claimed that were done for racial reasons. That's the issue.

THE COURT: I think what they did is important, but not what they intended to do but didn't do.

[22] MR. WYATT: Your Honor, he has in his brief stated on the record his – what he calls strategy, and he went in depth explaining his strategy in striking – in intending to strike Shirley Powell and intending to replace her with another juror.

MR. LANIER: But as the record reflects, she was excused for cause, which really has no bearing then on this Court's – and to no objection by the defense.

THE COURT: All right. I made my ruling.

Q Bobbie Grindstaff, the Church of God, you did strike her, is that correct?

A I certainly did.

Q Did her association with the Church of God have any bearing?

A I had no way of knowing that. All I know is she was definitely against the death penalty, even though we made a motion to strike her for cause, she was really rehabilitated by yourself, and we were not going to have Bobbie Grindstaff, who is a white juror. Now whether or not her church relationship played anything with her death penalty reservations, I have no way of knowing.

Q Anne Coultas is associated with the Mormon Church, and you did keep her.

A She is not a juror.

[23] Q But you did keep her. Is that correct? She was one of the 42 jurors that you considered in reaching your ten strikes.

THE COURT: Isn't that the same thing I just ruled on?

MR. PULLEN: I thought so. I would like to request that the Court keep Mr. Wyatt to the issue at hand required by Batson, and that is if there are racially-neutral reasons to remove those jurors that he's complaining about. As of this point, I've had discussions, when we were up here the last time, and some of the jurors that were black, I understood there was no issue to. I think he ought to define those jurors that he's now questioning, and we ought to restrict the questioning to why those jurors were removed.

Q Okay. Let's go to Marilyn Garrett then. She was Baptist. Is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q She was one of three Baptist jurors which you struck. Is that correct?

A I don't have any way of – I don't recall that.

Q I argued that – I contended that in my brief.

MR. PULLEN: Excuse me a minute. We're going back now to a comparison. If this comparison is [24] intended to show that – well, if it's intended for impeachment purposes, then we have no objection to it, if he wants to show that the district attorney is not telling the truth; but for any other purpose, we object to it, because it exceeds the bounds of Batson.

THE COURT: What is your purpose?

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, my purpose is to show that the State kept 24 out of 27 Baptist jurors; that two of the Baptist jurors were struck. One of her expressed her reservation against the death penalty, and the other one hesitated on the death penalty question; and the only other Baptist juror that was struck was Marilyn Garrett, who was black.

I think that's – you know, if the State wants to open the door on religion, I think we have the right to go all the way on it, Your Honor, and that's all we're asking. They've opened it in their arguments time and time again.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, there are the – the problem that we run into, and that's particularly demonstrated by the last filing that Mr. Wyatt made, you cannot separate one of these issues. When we come up here, and we have a juror; and we talk to the juror, religion is a portion of it. But it's [25] not all of it. Now we have no objections to going into that. I think Mr. Lanier has stated succinctly, as much as he could, why certain faiths we look at more than we do others. Some of them, I agree. Some of them are my suggestions. Some of them, he and I disagreed. Part of it – I mean, that's neither here nor there.

The question is: Why were these jurors, and he has yet to name the ones that he's talking about, why were they excused; and I don't see anything wrong with just asking the question which has been answered prior to any evidence being heard in the trial and in all of these post-trial pleadings that have been filed.

MR. WYATT: I have no response, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Well, go back to your question. Let me hear that again.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, there's been some argument since the last question. Let me maybe rephrase it.

Q Marilyn Garrett was Baptist. Is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q And she was struck, is that correct?

A That's correct. Religion made no part in the strike of Marilyn Garrett.

[26] THE COURT: Excuse me. Was she black or white?

MR. LANIER: She was black.

Q Did religion have any effect on the 24 white jurors that – white Baptist jurors that you kept?

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, we're back once again to the people that were kept.

THE COURT: I don't think Batson goes that far yet.

MR. WYATT: I think Gamble does though, Your Honor. It says, "We must examine the strikes of black jurors in light of the strikes of whites."

MR. LANIER: Well, strikes, yes, but not acceptances. That's my objection to the question.

MR. WYATT: We would contend that the strikes and acceptances are inter-related. They're a part of the same process that we're talking about here.

A I'll just say this, Mr. Wyatt, religion – I looked at religion basically with the Church of Christ and the Roman Catholic Church. I used those two religions as the primary concern about death penalty reservations. I've already stated that I did not consider that the Baptist affiliation took a stand against the death penalty, and Baptist, being affiliated with the Baptist Church, did not affect my consideration of Marilyn Garrett.

Q Okay. In your Batson brief, you indicated [27] that Eddie Hood was, – I believe in the Batson argument, was slow in response to questions, and was very, very confused about the use of the words “automatic” and “death penalty” and “life imprisonment”. Did you find that any of the other jurors were confused on the death penalty question?

MR. PULLEN: Objection, Your Honor, to “the other jurors”. The question was this man, and the totality of his answers. I don’t think you can separate one factor, and certainly, I can’t sit here after this length of time and recollect every – 50 jurors and make a comparison so that Mr. Wyatt can jump on an answer like a duck on a June bug and say, “Well, how about this one? How about that one?” That’s an improper question. It’s one that’s impossible to answer.

MR. WYATT: Judge, well, it is possible to answer, first of all. And this is one of those several subjective criteria which the State could use. The objective criteria don’t worry me, because we’ve pretty well answered those. But there’s no way to check the subjective criteria except to ask the district attorney whether or not he made similar determinations of other jurors, and see if he examined the white jurors the same way he examined the blacks.

[28] MR. PULLEN: We did not examine. The Court examined on those issues, Your Honor. The Court can, I assume, have the same recollection

Mr. Wyatt, Mr. Lanier and myself has. If not, then it's in the record what his responses were.

THE COURT: I think the objection is good. I sustain it.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, for the record, I wanted to ask similar questions about Mary Turner and Marilyn Garrett, but since the Court has ruled this out, I won't do it.

THE COURT: You want the record to show that you would have?

MR. WYATT: Yes, sir, I do.

THE COURT: All right.

Q Okay. You did – let me ask this. You did note that Marilyn Garrett said “yeah” four times. Is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q Is that your basis for saying she has complete disrespect for the Court and its authority?

A As I stated in my affidavit, this juror's demeanor played a major part in her excusal by the State. As noted in the record and from the prosecutor's notes, this juror appeared to be hostile to the Court, very [29] short answers, almost to the point of being curt and impudent, disrespectful to the Court by not looking at the Court in its voir dire and answered questions by “yeah”, having no eye contact with the prosecutor in his questioning, appearing nervous and shaky, with her voice quivering, and looking at the floor when questions concerning the death penalty were being asked by the Court. In short, the time the prosecutor – the short time the prosecutor had to examine this prospective juror, the juror exhibited what appeared to a poor attitude or a partiality. And I considered her to be a risk, based on her courtroom demeanor.

Q Would you agree or disagree with me if I told you Bonnie Thomas said “yeah” or “uh-huh” thirty-six times?

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, there is a difference between saying, “Oh, yeah, I understand,” and looking at somebody – it’s a tone-of-voice type thing. We object to this. We also object to the comparison that’s being made. Mr. Wyatt has yet to ask Mr. Lanier why this juror was struck. I was privy – I was not here for the striking of the jury. I did compare notes. I do know what the reasons are, and I don’t see that it’s helping this Court to go through and get something that is so peripheral that it doesn’t even matter in the central matter of things. [30] The comparison is our objection right now, Your Honor.

MR. WYATT: Since he’s talking about the central matter of things, in the central matter of things, it has been a comparison of the use of strikes of black and white jurors.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, if he wants to compare what our reasons are, and he is not in ignorance of those, we stated them at least twice; and yet he is going to things that – when we answer a question on something like Batson, we’re placed in a most uncomfortable position. We’re being called racist for doing our jobs.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, for the record, I have not used the term “racist.”

THE COURT: Do not interrupt him.

MR. PULLEN: It’s either – it’s at least implied in there. We have to come forward with our racially-neutral reasons. In order to do that, we throw in our whole entire evaluation of a juror. Now central to this, and Mr. Wyatt knows it; and we’ve told the Court, is this woman – the thing that turned me off, and the thing that I recall most distinctly, and correct me if I’m wrong, this is the social worker, the lady that worked at Head Start. That’s the reason we did it. Now if he can demonstrate [31] that we took other people who were social workers, then that might very well be something to go into. But we’re getting amorphous, particularly when we’re getting into use of just particular black-lettered language out of the transcript. There’s a difference between tone of voice, attitude, inflection, that kind of thing, and somebody else might answer in exactly the same fashion but give the impression to us that that juror is sympathetic. And that’s something that cannot be established by what he’s trying to do, just who used short answers, “Uh-huh, yeah; no,” that kind of thing at this juncture. It’s just totally impossible.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, they are – they open up a door, and then they object when we come through. They opened up the door counting “Yeahs” and “Uh-huhs”, “Yeahs” anyway; not us. Now they object to us asking about it on other jurors.

MR. PULLEN: That’s not the criteria, Your Honor. The criteria is why we removed these jurors. If he wants to go into those criteria and go down the whole and entire list – you cannot separate one factor from another. We’re judging a total human being up there, religion, their answers, their attitudes, the whole shooting match.

[32] THE COURT: And you’ve indicated an inflection, a voice inflection, I believe.

MR. PULLEN: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I agree with you that you can answer the same question the same way but with a different voice inflection, which would, to me, give me a different meaning or a different attitude, we’ll say. Not meaning necessarily, but attitude. I sustain the objection.

Q Okay. Both in your Batson argument and in your Batson brief, you indicated that Marilyn Garrett was being less than truthful when she said that she was not familiar with the Morton Bend area.

THE COURT: Was not familiar with the –

MR. WYATT: Not familiar with the Highland Circle area.

A Well, the question was: Was she familiar with the north Rome area, and her answer was, "No." And, yes, I felt that that was not correct. When I looked down on the questionnaire and found out that she had gone to Main Elementary School, which was less than two blocks from – that's in the north Rome area, number one, and that is less than two blocks from Highland Circle, where the crime took place.

I also noted that she works at Head Start, which is [33] on Reservoir Street, which is between three or four city blocks from where Tim Foster lived. I felt like she was being less than candid with the Court.

Q Okay. Let me ask you these questions. Is Main High located on the route from Morton Bend – I'm sorry. Is Highland Circle located on the route from Morton Bend to Main High? Do you go by Highland Circle?

THE COURT: Did you say "Morton Bend"?

MR. WYATT: Yeah, Morton Bend, out in the Coosa area, Your Honor. That's where Marilyn Garrett lived when she went to high school, and she was bused to Main High School from the Morton Bend area.

A I had no idea which route she took at that time.

Q You know Rome, don't you?

A I certainly do.

Q Any direct route, would it be on the way?

A Would Highland Circle be on the way?

Q Would be on the way?

A It would not be a direct way from Morton Bend.

Q. It would be out of the way. Is that not correct?

A I'm not saying it's out of the way. It's less than two city blocks, less than two blocks. But the question was asked: Was she familiar with the north Rome area.

[34] She said, "No." And the north Rome area is Main Elementary.

Q All right. Are you correcting that to say that she should be familiar with the north Rome area but not the Highland Circle area?

A When you say "correcting", I'm saying that when she said that, she was not familiar with the north Rome area, and yet she went to school there; and she works there, I felt that her answer was inaccurate.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, we've made the offer into other testimony, and that's all the questions we have.

* * *

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. PULLEN:

Q Mr. Lanier, prior to the trial of the case, prior to the jury selection, you and I had extensive discussions on the selection of this particular jury. Did we not?

A That's correct.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, they have stopped us from going into areas such as this, and we would make the same objection.

THE COURT: What's the purpose of this?

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, I'm going to demons-[35]trate, not only did we not have a – did we not discriminate in this case, but that we had no intent; and our purpose was, in fact, the contrary, and that there were good and sufficient reasons for us to actively look for black jurors in the trial of this case.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, he is – during the Batson hearing, during his Batson argument and the affidavits, which I have not seen yet, it indicated what his intended motive is. The Court has restricted us from going to this area while he's on the stand, and we ask that you now restrict the State on cross examination.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, there's a – I'm sorry.

MR. WYATT: On direct, I'm sorry.

MR. PULLEN: There is a difference. What he was doing was trying to go into the relationship between these strikes and other jurors. We want to go in and zero in strictly on what Batson talks about, and that is, removing jurors of the defendant's race; and we want to be able to demonstrate to this Court that not only did we have race-neutral reasons, but we had reasons not to discriminate in this particular case.

THE COURT: Well, now I let that in. That is [36] what we're after.

MR. LANIER: Yes, sir.

MR. PULLEN: Thank you.

Q In this particular case, other than the confession that's involved, Lisa Stubbs was to be, and we felt like would be up into the trial of the case when she backed up, the primary witness?

A That's correct.

Q And is she white or black?

A She is black.

Q Did we not have a discussion about taking several black jurors to avoid the – what's commonly referred to as the white-lynch-mob argument the defense lawyers will make to jurors during the sentencing phase of the trial?

A That's correct.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, I object to that unless he knew we intended to make that white-lynch-mob argument.

THE COURT: I sustain the objection.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, it just goes to our planning in advance. We, of course, there's no way that we can know that.

Q Was there not also a discussion that this case would basically transcend race because it involved elderly, and that cases involving children and elderly people [37] generally do not have racial overtones unless they're built into the case?

A That's correct.

Q Other than the difference between the races of the victim and the defendant in this case, were there any other racial aspects to the case?

A No, there were not.

Q Of course, when – let me just ask you this. The Church of Christ business, where did that come from?

A You.

Q I just wanted that to be clear, and also, Mr. Lanier, did – if we had selected, as we had discussed, a number of jurors that we have discussed, then perhaps we would have avoided this Batson claim, and that's another legitimate reason not to be involved in this kind of thing.

A That's correct.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, that calls for a conclusion of law. I'd object to that.

THE COURT: Conclusion on whose part?

MR. WYATT: His.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, it's his intent that's being inquired into, his and mine.

THE COURT: That's my understanding. I overrule the objection.

Q Now insofar as jury selection goes, how long [38] have you been involved in serving the people of Georgia in prosecution, either as an assistant district attorney with the prosecuting attorney's counsel or as district attorney of this circuit?

A Also ten years now.

Q During that time, have you read literature by other prosecutors on how to select jurors?

A I have.

Q What is the attitude that they universally have toward social workers?

A Stay away from them. As I stated in my affidavit, social workers tend to relate to people and tend to sympathize with an underdog, and the defendant in this case, knowing the facts up front, what the defenses were and knowing the social-economic condition of the defendant, you know, I wanted to stay away from any social worker.

Q Can you give the Court an example of what you're talking about from this very same case?

A I think the prime example is one witness that was called by the defense, named Marnie Dodd. If the Court will recall, she was a social worker, somewhat, in our opinion, burnt out, because she referred to her clientele as "pond of scum". But she was the type of person that we wanted to stay away from.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, I'm going to object to [39] going into Marnie Dodd's testimony, because that was after the jury selection took place.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, we're offering it only as an example. We don't insist upon it.

THE COURT: I'll let it in only for that, because he's right. It was after the selection.

Q Now I had made a statement, and you and I had discussed it on several occasions, that the State does not select a jury, particularly in a death penalty case, but culls a jury. Would you acquaint the Court with that discussion?

A Yes, sir. Obviously, since we have an inequity in strikes, the defense has twenty, and we have ten, we don't get to select a jury. The defense selects a jury. We only have the opportunity to cull out those people that we feel like would not vote for a particular defendant or a verdict of guilty or the death penalty in this case. We were up front with the Court in telling the Court back on April the 27th, that, you know, we were after the death penalty; that we probably could have taken the first twelve people in the box on the guilt/innocence. But our questioning of these jurors was primarily, and our concern and the way we voted in our strikes, were concerned primarily with the death penalty case and phase, and whether or not they would have backbone or the where-[40]withal or the knowledge or whatever it took to vote for the death penalty. So with our ten strikes, we have to cull out those people that we have even the slightest reservation about, concerning the death penalty.

Q One other question. Based on your experience and your research insofar as the selection or culling of the jury, what is the standard attitude insofar as jurors who themselves or their families have criminal connections?

A I, in the two hundred and some odd jury trials that I have tried and the now five death penalties that I have tried, we stay – I stay away from jurors with family members who are, you know, criminally connected in some way or another. That concerned me about, obviously, Mary Turner, because of her family situation involving her brother-in-law, her own husband. She's even been sentenced by this Court – not she has, but her husband has been sentenced by this Court for carrying concealed weapons in a public gathering.

I wanted to stay away from her. Eddie Hood, of course, had a son the exact same age as the defendant and had a prior theft by taking conviction from our district attorney's office, from this circuit. So we – I stay away from jurors that have, you know, either themselves or their family members have criminal convictions or a criminal record.

[41] Q The Head Start lady, I believe, had a relative too that was – that had just had a right high profile drug case being prosecuted or was in the process of prosecuting that in court.

MR. WYATT: Your Honor, he's leading the witness.

MR. PULLEN: I have him on cross examination.

THE COURT: That's right.

A That's something that Clayton Lundy, my investigator, had informed me during the jury selection that Marilyn Garrett, her first cousin is Angela Garrett. As the Court will recall, two months prior to the jury selection, she was arrested. She was a basketball coach at one of the local schools, and she was arrested for cocaine and terminated; and my investigator was concerned about her relationship with this first cousin; the fact that the police did cause her job to be – her coaching job to be vacated, and the fact that she knew a relative that had just been recently arrested for cocaine; and yet she denied knowing anyone with a drug or an alcohol problem.

MR. PULLEN: I think – Your Honor, I think we’ve covered all the people. I would like to inquire of defense counsel, because I had varying signals from him, as to which jurors they now feel that we need to establish racially-neutral reasons on. I [42] don’t think that would be an improper question.

MR. WYATT: I think all of them, Your Honor. Batson brings every one of the black jurors into issue.

THE COURT: Well, I didn’t sit here and count, but have you covered them all?

MR. PULLEN: Well, Your Honor, in a previous discussion, Mr. Wyatt had indicated –

MR. WYATT: I’ll concede Evelyn Hardge.

MR. PULLEN: All right. Evelyn Hardge, that’s the one we have not gone into. There were some other concessions at the time, but I don’t want to go into those now. Have we talked about Mr. Hood, Mr. Garrett and Mrs. Turner, have we not?

MR. LANIER: That’s correct.

MR. PULLEN: That’s all I have.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. WYATT:

Q Steve, you say you want to avoid jurors with family members with criminal connections. Is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q You kept Martha Duncan?

A That's correct.

Q She had a nephew who was convicted and served [43] time for an armed robbery. Is that correct?

A That's correct, and as I stated, the reason I kept Martha Duncan was that she had very good answers on the death penalty. She was a teacher, which I wanted. She lived close to the area, which I wanted, and she also was very confused when answering a question about the nephew. She didn't -- you know, that's in Atlanta on an armed robbery thing that I didn't think it was a close relative, and I didn't feel like in any way that that would impair her from reaching a death penalty in this case; and, obviously, the fact that she voted for the death penalty, we were right in that assumption.

Q You also, on Martha Duncan, noted that she lived very close to Highland Circle and worked very close to Highland Circle. Is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q Yet she stated that she was not familiar with the Highland Circle area?

A That's correct.

Q Did you find any reason to believe she was being less than truthful on that?

A No.

Q Yet you found that Marilyn Garrett was being less than truthful with you?

A Yes, I did. Marilyn Garrett, again, works in [44] and, you know, went to school in, and I felt she was less than truthful.

Q Well, Martha Duncan works in and lives in –

A And the question to her was: Are you familiar with the Highland Circle area, if I'm not mistaken. She was not asked the question: Are you familiar with the north Rome area. She was asked the question if she was familiar with the Highland Circle area. Had that question been asked of Marilyn Garrett, then I probably wouldn't have had any reason to suspect her.

Q You also, in your brief, mentioned that you try to avoid jurors with family psychiatric problems. Is that correct, a history of psychiatric problems in the family?

A Well, on an insanity case, yes. I think my primary concern was with the Northwest Georgia Regional Hospital. We do have a regional psychiatric facility in Floyd County.

Q You kept Arlene Blackman, who used to be associated with Northwest Georgia Regional?

A She was no longer employed with Northwest Regional, but while she was employed with Northwest Regional, she was in maintenance.

Q Well, so was Eddie Hood's wife. She was in food service, wasn't she?

[45] A She was still employed.

Q In food service?

A At Northwest Georgia Regional. I wanted to avoid any juror that was presently employed at Northwest Georgia Regional.

Q But used to – that's the difference. Arlene Blackman used to be employed at Northwest Georgia Regional. Is that correct?

A That's correct. She was no longer – she's a housewife.

Q One of the reasons for striking Eddie Hood was that his brother used to, years ago, be involved in law enforcement as a drug consultant. Did "used to" matter in that particular analysis?

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, he's comparing oranges, apples, lemons, grapes, coconuts, every different kind of thing in this. I think we have stated our reasons, and up until this point, that had not even been raised. He's beating a horse that can't even be dead, because it's never been brought to life.

MR. WYATT: I want to know when "used to" is a valid reason, Your Honor. That's the only thing we're seeking.

THE COURT: I'll let him answer that.

A Mr. Wyatt, as I stated, I did not want anybody [46] who was presently or whose spouse was presently employed at Northwest Georgia Hospital. As I said, in my ten years experience of prosecuting ten insanity cases, I did not want anybody associated with the mental hospital on a present basis. Obviously, had I found out that Arlene Blackman – in looking at her in the past, she made – she stated on the record she had no training, no training in psychiatry; so I wasn't concerned about Arlene Blackman. Plus, I also really liked her questions, her answers to the death penalty. She felt like anybody who pleads insanity, that that's just a trick, that they – just to – it's an excuse, and I liked her answers on the death penalty; so I evaluated, as Mr. Pullen says, the whole Arlene Blackman. And I evaluated the whole Eddie Hood. The bottom line on the striking of all those things, and we have all these reasons put forth, but the bottom line on Marilyn Garrett, obviously, was Head Start. The bottom line on Mary Turner was, obviously, she was less than truthful with the Court and because of her family's criminal history. And the bottom line on Eddie Hood is the Church of Christ affiliation.

Q Okay. Let me ask you on Eddie Hood and Mary Turner. Had either one of them had any training in psychology?

A I have no way of knowing that. I don't know.

[47] Q You have no way of knowing it?

A I don't know that.

Q It was asked, wasn't it?

A I don't know. I don't recall.

Q But you do have a way of knowing whether Arlene Blackman had any training in psychology? Correct?

A I couldn't understand your question.

Q You do have a way to know whether Arlene Blackman had had any training in psychology or psychiatry?

A You asked the questions, yes; and she responded. And I liked her answers.

Q When did you first point out to the Court that Marilyn Garrett had a sister with problems, Angela?

THE COURT: Had a what?

MR. WYATT: I'm sorry, had a first cousin with problems with cocaine?

A This is something that the court reporter and I have gone over time and time. It was during a break or at some point in time during the trial, I let the Court know that as an afterthought, that Mr. Lundy had advised me about Marilyn Garrett. And I advised the Court. The law clerk remembers it. I certainly remember, and unfortunately it's not on the record. We have examined that record. We have listened to the tapes. It's not on there. I'm not bringing out something today that I [48] didn't let the Court know six months ago, but I wanted to perfect it to let you know, to let everybody know that that was one of the reasons about our concern of Marilyn Garrett; that she did have a first cousin that had been arrested for cocaine; that my black investigator was concerned enough about her relationship with that first cousin to talk to me about it during the jury selection and to make me aware of it. Through inadvertence or oversight, I did not let the court know about it when I gave my reasons, but shortly after that, I stated on the record what my reasons were as an afterthought. It's just not there.

MR. WYATT: Can I confer with Mr. Pullen?

MR. LANIER: Sure.

(Inaudible colloquy between Mr. Wyatt and Mr. Pullen.)

Q But you do remember that you told the Court this sometime after the jury was empaneled?

A Yes, it was certainly after the jury was empaneled; and I can't recall at what point in time. I thought it was after the first day, but shortly thereafter.

MR. WYATT: That's all I have.

MR. PULLEN: You can come down.

MR. LANIER: All right.

THE COURT: Anything further?

MR. WYATT: That's all the evidence that we [49] have, Your Honor.

THE COURT: How about the State?

MR. LANIER: Nothing.

MR. PULLEN: Your Honor, I would like to just state in my place my reasons for – seeing that it's the one ambiguous place now in the record is my counseling Mr. Lanier about members of the Church of Christ. And I will be glad to state in my place and answer any questions that Mr. Wyatt might have.

When I first began prosecuting, back in 1972, I made the acquaintance of a man named Harry Golden, who was a retired United States Marine Corps master sergeant. Mr. Golden was in security, retail security for Sears and Roebuck in Columbus. He and I became close friends. Harry was a lay minister, and subsequently pastored a church that was majority black in Columbus. On a few occasions, I wouldn't tell the Court how many, it certainly was not regular, I attended that church to listen to my friend preach. He and I had discussed this matter on many occasions. He has never, in fact, told me point blank that there was any tenet of that church that involved the death penalty. He did caution me, when we began – as best I can recall, perhaps 1975, as we discussed jurors in capital cases, to be extremely cautious [50] of members of his own faith. I did not inquire.

It had been my experience that it was rare to find a member of that faith that would pass the Witherspoon, and now Witherspoon/Witt test. The vast majority of them, and in this case, if I recall correctly, and I believe I pointed this out to Mr. Lanier, three out of four jurors who professed to be members of the Church of Christ, went off for Witherspoon or Witherspoon/Witt reasons. Subsequent to that time, in a case – and Mr. Lanier is right. We don't select a jury. We just get rid of those folks that are the absolute worst. The disparity in strikes just takes jury selection strategy out of what we do.

There was a case tried that I was co-counsel on, in Columbus, where a member of that faith was on the jury. There was subsequently a verdict in the case. The verdict was death, but that jury remained locked up for an extended period of time. I was acquainted with one of the members of the jury, who specifically told me that this woman's reasons were religious. They went to her faith. She thought she could do it, but she could not turn her back on her faith; and that was my reasoning in this particular case.

[51] MR. WYATT: Your Honor, if I may interject. He is doing the exact same thing that the Court has not allowed me to do. He's going into past cases to give his reasons for either keeping or striking a juror. The Court – we had earlier proffered some testimony about –

MR. PULLEN: (Interposing) Jamie, I can't hear you.

MR. WYATT: We had previously proffered some testimony regarding the Duck case, where a black juror hung that up, and the Court restricted us from going into counsel's past experiences with juries; and we think that is somewhat contradictory. We'll contend that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. PULLEN: That was the end of my explanation for the court's benefit. I do not claim to be an expert, but those two things, the advice that I received from my friend, followed by the experience that we had on the only occasion that I'm familiar with that one ever served, just left us cold on those folks, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. If there is nothing further, I adjourn this hearing.

MR. LANIER: Judge, we do have – I'm sorry. [52] There is one other thing that we wanted to file. We've already filed it in the clerk's office this morning. It's something that we've already alluded to both in the – this was the affidavit by my chief investigator, Clayton Lundy, with the attached copy of the warrant charging Angela Garrett with the cocaine possession.

MR. WYATT: In light of this first affidavit, I have a question to the State.

MR. LANIER: Yes.

MR. WYATT: Either counsel can – this is an affidavit from Clayton Lundy stating that he assisted Doug Pullen and Steve Lanier in the jury selection process. That he, prior to the jury selection, did a background check on several of the black jurors that had been summoned to serve on the jury in the Tim Foster case. My question is: Did Clayton Lundy or anybody else do a background check on the white jurors prior to jury selection?

MR. LANIER: Yes.

MR. WYATT: And was the background check as extensive as the background check on these black jurors?

MR. LANIER: Yes. Judge, they – I wanted to state – one moment, Your Honor. I just wanted to [53] do one bit of argument, if you don't mind, Your Honor.

We've looked over the Batson cases, and I wanted to give some examples that previous cases have ruled in favor of the – or justifying a prosecutor's use of strikes. And these are some examples that are both in the State and Federal decisions, but I think they will benefit you in your determination, because, simply your role is to determine the credibility of whether or not these reasons were racially neutral. Whether they were specific.

THE COURT: Are you writing these down?

THE LAW CLERK: Yes, sir.

MR. LANIER: And I'll give her a copy of these examples, but you have to – your factual finding, (1.) Has to – it involves credibility, obviously, the credibility of the prosecutor and your past experience with myself. It also applies to the case – the ultimate case to be decided, which we've alleged in this situation to be the death penalty, the case to be tried. It goes into the racially neutral, specific and legitimate reasons. And these are examples of permissible strikes that have been held in U.S. v Love, when a prosecutor stated he removed the sole black venireman because he had [54] heard of a business which was owned by a person who the government expected to be called as an alibi witness for the defendant. I don't think that's applicable, but if a juror had even heard of a business which was owned by a person that was to be a defense witness –

Second, of course, was U.S. v Cartlidge. U.S. v Cartlidge, is, I think – it has an affidavit that I used as a part of my examples when I filed my affidavit. These were some of the reasons: The juror was young, single and unemployed, avoided eye contact with the prosecutor. The juror's brother was convicted of robbery. A juror was divorced and appeared to have a low-income occupation. The juror knew defense counsel and had worked for an agency the defense counsel had done business with.

THE COURT: Had what? What was that last one?

MR. LANIER: The juror knew defense counsel and had worked for an agency that the defense counsel had done business with. That is U.S. v Cartlidge, 808 Fed 2d, 1064 at 1070.

Also in U.S. v Vaccaro, where a brother of a juror was imprisoned for robbery. Poor attitude in answering voir dire questions, that's Vaccaro. Juror fell asleep during jury selection process, had pre-[55]vious problems with the IRS. Juror's sons had been in trouble with the law; that's U.S. v Forbes, 316 Fed 2d, page 1006. Juror late for court and inattentive. Prosecutor felt this indicated a lack of commitment to the court and to these proceedings, U.S. v Matthews. Juror had grave reservations about the propriety of government tape recording conversations, again, U.S. v Matthews. Defendant was an elected official and a minister. Juror may have been a constituent, and may have attended defendant's church. Government had been criticized by the press; that's U.S. v Woods, 612 Fed 2d, 1483. Juror in advanced stages of pregnancy; that's U.S. v David. Juror was a government employee, and prosecutor believed all government employees tend to be naive. That may be true, but that's still what was the legitimate, specific, neutral reason, U.S. v David. Juror's son on probation. Juror familiar with the location where the government expected the defendant to claim he had been at the time of the robbery.

The hostile manner with which the juror looked at the prosecutor; that's U.S. v Matthews. Juror struck because of their unemployment, or the fact that they were recently employed; that's Mincy versus the State at 183 Georgia Appeals, page 440.

[56] THE COURT: That's a Floyd County case, isn't it?

MR. LANIER: No, sir, I don't Mincy v State [sic] is. That was a 1987 decision, or '85 decision, but I don't think it's –

THE COURT: No, no. If it's an '85, it's not.

MR. LANIER: Juror did not appear to be particularly interested in or responsive to the selection process. Juror had been involved in a long, drawn out and still ongoing child support case involving the D.A.'s office; that's at Gamble v State. Juror's brother had been prosecuted in the Federal Court on various drug charges; that's Gamble v State. Juror excused because law enforcement officials advised the prosecution that this would not be a good juror for a drug case. That was held to be a legitimate and non-discriminating. And one juror gave contradictory responses to questions posed by the prosecutor, and that's Henderson v State, 257 Georgia at page 436.

I think it's important for us – for the Court to realize that the amount of time we deliberate in looking at our strikes and exercising our strikes is important. For the record, of course, this case took – the jury selection was five days. We spent [57] the weekend going over the jury list, and we came in Monday morning ready to strike the jury. So in length of time and the demeanor of the – the demeanor and time taken to make strikes shows a careful process of deliberation, based on many factors and not purely on race. That's U.S. v Matthews, 803 Fed 2d, 325.

The reasons that have specifically been held not to be sufficient, that are not race-neutral, and I think this is the key, the prosecutor's assumption or his intuitive judgment the juror would be partial to a defendant because of their shared race. That's the whole issue of Batson. An excusal of black jurors because defense attorney was black, and prosecutor's past experience showed an affinity between black jurors and an attorney. This was also held to be proper. That's U.S. v Brown, page 17, Fed 2d, at 674.

So these are the types of things, Your Honor, that I want the Court – I know the Court is going to reserve a ruling on this. The Court has listened. We have filed all of our affidavits. The Court knows that we have taken the time and the effort to deliberate over the selection of these jurors. These selections have been applicable to both black and white jurors, as evidenced by testimony and on [58] the affidavit. So we're asking that the Judge's ruling back on April 27th, when you affirmed and felt that the defense had not carried the burden, which the burden is their responsibility. We ask that that decision again to be affirmed by the Court, and that his motion for a mistrial or a new trial be denied. Thank you.

MR. WYATT: May it please the Court. We disagree with the burden of proof. The burden is initially on the defense to show the racial exclusion, and once we have proved that the racial exclusion, in this case total racial exclusion, then the burden shifts to the State to show that their reason or intent was race neutral. In Batson v –

THE COURT: She's not hearing you. It's hard enough when you're facing us.

MR. WYATT: I'm sorry. In Batson v Kentucky, it clearly places the burden of proof is [sic] on the prosecution. The various quotes from Batson, which I want to read to the Court, at page 1714, Batson states, "Once the defendant raises an inference of prima facie discrimination, the burden shifts to the State to come forward with a mutual [sic] explanation."

At page 1716, "The exclusion of black citizens from service as jurors constitutes a primary example [59] of the evil the Fourteenth Amendment was designed to cure."

At page 1717, the Batson court states, "The defendant has a right to be tried by a jury whose members are selected pursuant to nondiscriminatory criteria." As Gamble v State points out, "The Court must evaluate the reasons for striking black jurors in light of the explanation for striking black jurors."

Also, page 1717 of the Batson case, Batson states, “That the very idea of a jury is a body composed of the peers or equals of the person whose rights it is selected or summoned to determine; that is, of his neighbors, fellows, associates, persons having the same legal status in society as that which he holds.”

We want you to compare that test to the test which the State sets out in page 5 of its brief. First of all, there are two tests we want you to examine. One of them is the repeated ascertainment [sic] that Marilyn Garrett is of low income status, and that was reason for striking her. The second test is, that at page five of the prosecution’s brief of this case, the prosecution attempted to exclude any juror who could identify with the defendant and his [60] surroundings. This included age, gender, income status, marital status, the education background, family mental or criminal history, association with psychiatric or deprived children facilities and any other visible circumstantial evidence which could influence the juror to sympathize with the defendant. To allow the State to strike all black jurors, using such tests, we contend would certainly cripple the commitment which Batson make in their [sic] protection clause of the fourteenth amendment to the nondiscriminatory criteria which Batson and Gamble mandates.

However, using this test, which we contend is unconstitutional and improper, the State has kept in every one of this categories, a white juror and struck a black juror, which was put in these categories, without exception. And we contend that even using this unconstitutional test, the State failed to meet its own test in this situation. We contend that the only consistent criteria which the State used to exclude jurors in this case, and the numbers will show it, is race.

Back to Batson, on page 1718, Batson states that, “Selection procedures that purposefully exclude black persons from juries undermine public confidence in the fairness of our system of justice. Discrimination within the judicial system is most pernicious because it is a ‘stimulant to that race prejudice which is an impediment to securing to [black citizens] that equal justice which the law aims to secure to all others.’”

We also refer to Clemming v Kemp, 790, 4 Fed 2d, 1478. It’s an 11th Circuit case, 1966, and we quote from page 1483. It says, “A single and discriminatory governmental act is not immunized by the absence of such discrimination in the making of other decisions.” In other words, if the Court just examines this one jury, good or bad acts which have been brought out by or attempted – proffered by the district attorney in previous cases or in hiring a black investigator, does not immunize the State against discrimination in the selection process of this case or any other case.

In this case, the following objective criteria, we contend, was not applied equally to white and black jurors, and in our brief we have laid out the numbers on each one of them, the age of the jurors, the age of the jurors’ sons, gender, religion, marital status in jurors, employment or lack of employment, the criminal record of family members and the knowledge of the jurors – of people with alcohol and [62] drug problems. We also contend that in a couple, the State has used some contradictory and shifting standards. In a couple of cases, they're exactly 180 degrees. One example is on the issue of whether a juror wanted off or not. Hugh Hubbard testified that he wanted off when I examined him. I asked Hugh Hubbard why he wanted off, and Mr. Pullen, for the State, objected. He said that that juror's reason for wanting off was not relevant, was irrelevant to his motive or intent, which was irrelevant to any prejudices or biases which he had in this case. Yet Mr. Lanier, on April the 27th, during the Batson hearing, said that he could strike Eddie Hood because he asked to be off, and he could strike him for that reason alone. So in that case; we have a juror wanting off, on one hand being totally irrelevant and having nothing to do with his prejudices or biases in the case, and on the other hand being the absolute Batson criteria according to the State.

Also, in employment, the State has gone 180 degrees. During the Batson hearing on April 27th, the State stated that they wanted jurors with good employment. In our first Batson brief, the defense pointed out that the State struck two back [sic] jurors [63] who had two jobs each. The reply in the State's Batson brief was that no black jurors served who kept two jobs. Once again, 180 degrees on their criteria. The subjective criteria is hard to check into.

Your Honor, defense counsel are compelled – is compelled to investigate and question and uncover the State's motives in this case, in this case, the counsel for the State, motives. We believe we have done so. We believe in our investigation we have pointed out any inconsistencies and contradictions by the State. It is our contention that we have met the Batson burden of proof; that we have shown that the State has failed to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the reasons for striking all four blacks, which was total exclusion of blacks in the case, the State has failed to show those reasons were race neutral in the case of this jury. Thank you.

MR. LANIER: Your Honor, and for the record he conceded that striking Evelyn Hardge was not a factor – he conceded on the record that he was not contesting the striking of Mrs. Hardge. So, obviously, –

THE COURT: Well the Court remembers in great detail Evelyn Hardge. I don't think either side would [64] have wanted Evelyn Hardge.

MR. LANIER: I agree with you. In his motion that we received, the last one that he filed, he then goes on to say, we should have taken Eddie Hood and Marilyn Garrett rather than the other three jurors. He mentioned Mary Turner in that list. I don't know, but I want the Court to note that under U.S. v Mathews it says, "The defendant bears the ultimate burden of proving intentional discrimination. We do not feel that they have met that burden.

THE COURT: I believe I've said that this hearing was adjourned, how many times?

MR. LANIER: A bunch.

THE COURT: Well, anyway, this is one more time I'm saying it.

[In the Superior Court of Floyd County]

AFFIDAVIT

(Filed Nov. 24, 1987)

COMES NOW, Clayton Lundy, and under oath states the following:

I, Clayton Lundy, assisted Doug Pullen and Steve Lanier in the jury selection of Tim Foster. Before the jury was selected I did a background check on several of the black jurors who have been summoned to serve on the jury of the Tim Foster case. The check on the jurors was done before, during and upon picking of the jury for the Tim Foster case. My evaluation of the jurors are as follows:

EDDIE HOOD

Mr. Hood lives in a middle-class neighborhood. I think Mr. Hood works at Georgia Kraft, and has been employeed [sic] there for a long period of time. I think he has established himself in the community as being well-known and a good family person. A criminal check reveals that his son has a misdemenao[r] [sic] conviction for theft by taking. In a non-death penalty case I feel Mr. Hood would be a good juror. However, because of his answers in voir dire [sic] and hesitation concerning the imposition of the death penalty, I recommend that he not be selected in this case.

Since this was a death penalty case, I recommend strongly that Mr. Hood not be selected.

MARY TURNER

Ms. Turner resides in a middle-class neighborhood. Ms. Turner works at North West Georgia Regional Hospital. Ms. Turner is basically a good person and provides for her family. But Mrs. Turner's husband has family members with criminal records. Due to the criminal activities of Ms. Turner's husband's family, with which she has to identify with; I don't think in my opinion, she could be a fair juror in this case. Also, Ms. Turner has stated that she is my half-sister but this is not true.

During the jury selection of Ms. Turner, she answered some of the questions on the questionnaire wrong. She denied having any criminal history in her family or husband's family. Also, during jury selection she stated she was my half-sister, and as I stated before this is not true. My biggest concern was, she never mentioned Otis Turner as having a criminal history or her husband.

Upon picking the jury I recommend that we do not select this juror.

MARILYN GARRETT

Ms. Garrett lives at 306 East 18th Street, which is a low to middle income range neighborhood. She lives in a possible duplex apartment. Mrs. Garrett comes from a neighborhood called Morton Bend, a community near Coosa, Georgia. The community is possibly all related. Ms. Garrett works possibly two jobs. One job is at Pepperell and the other is at Headstart. Ms. Garrett deals everyday with low income parents and children that live in the projects close to where Tim Foster lived. I advised Mr. Lanier, be very careful in picking Ms. Garrett for a juror in this case due to the case we have on Angela Garrett who lost a teaching and coaching job due to a Cocaine arrest.

During jury selection I observed Ms. Garrett, that she was nervous and short with her answers. I was shocked when Ms. Garrett said that she was not familiar with the North Rome area when she works in this area, possibly two to three blocks away from the area where Mrs. White was killed.

I advised Mr. Lanier not to select Ms. Garrett, due to her relationship with Angela Garrett whom we have warrants on for Violation of Georgia Controlled Substance Act and her affiliation with Head Start.

I, Clayton Lundy, having worked with and knowing Mr. Pullen and Mr. Lanier, each of us knowing the seriousness and penalty of this crime; can honestly state that the strikes used by Mr. Pullen and Mr. Lanier were not racially biased.

CRIMINAL ACTION
NO. 86-2218-2

TIMOTHY TYRONE FOSTER

ORDER ON MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

(Filed Feb. 3, 1988)

This matter having come on regularly to be heard, and after consideration of the arguments, briefs, and transcript in the above-styled case, the Court denies the Defendant's Motion for New Trial.

In his motion, Defendant argues that this Court erred by finding that the District Attorney had exercised the state's peremptory strikes in a racially neutral manner as required by Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. ___, 106 S.C. 1712 (1986).

The Georgia Supreme Court decision of Gamble v. State, 257 Ga. 325, 357 S.E.2d 792 (1987) was rendered on July 9, 1987, after the trial of this case. However counsel on both sides have addressed the strikes in its light in their arguments and briefs on the motion for a new trial.

At trial, the Court found that the Defendant Foster met his burden under Batson of showing a prima facie case of purposeful discrimination in selection of the petit jury. This finding was based upon, first, the fact that the Defendant is a member of a cognizable racial group. Next, that the victim in the case was white, and the defendant Foster is black. Further, that the prosecutor did exercise four of his peremptory strikes against venire members of the Defendant's race, which eliminated the venire members who shared the Defendant's race. However, this Court did not believe that these factors alone were sufficient to constitute a prima facie showing entitling Defendant Foster to an explanation of the state's use of its peremptory challenges to strike black veniremen. The final factor was that, although the Defendant's counsel suggested the peculiar notion at trial that the defense did not have the burden as movant, they did argue to the Court that there were no reasons independent of race for the striking of the four black veniremen. Although the facts argued were not extensive, merely pointing out that none of the four, except Mrs. Hardge, had met or knew the Defendant's family, or had read the local newspaper a great deal, in combination with the previous factors no other particular reason stood out about these potential jurors other than race (except for Mrs. Hardge). Therefore, the Court found that a prima facie showing had been made.

In response to the Court's statement that the burden had shifted to the state, the prosecutor elucidated reasons (Trial Transcript at 1357 – 1377) for the strikes of each of the four black jurors which comported with the mandate in Batson for "clear and reasonably specific" explanations of his "legitimate reasons." Batson, 106 S.C. at 1723, n. 20. Before addressing the specific reasons the prosecution gave for each of the contested strikes, some preliminary observations are in order.

Batson instructs that the Equal Protection Clause permits strikes for reasons which are related to the prosecutor's view of the outcome of the case; however a challenge solely due to race is impermissible. Batson, 106 S.C. at 1719. This Court evaluated the prosecutor's reasons in light of his stated objective, namely that of obtaining a jury capable of rendering the death penalty. The Court, knowing the nature of the crime and this prosecutor, finds that a completely credible statement.

In addition, voir dire took place from Monday, April 20, 1987 to Friday, April 24, 1987. The actual jury selection occurred on the morning of Monday, April 27, 1987. This means that both the prosecution and the defense had the intervening weekend to carefully assess the prospective jurors. In this particular case, where each venireman had filled out a five-page questionnaire, and was questioned in voir dire for approximately 30 minutes, clearly both sides had a lot of material to digest in determining their strikes. In light of the obvious attentiveness that the prosecuting attorneys displayed to the answers given on the written questionnaire and during the extensive voir dire, and the lengthy period which was used to determine strikes, the Court believes that the prosecutors involved undertook long and careful assessments based on many factors. This contributes to the Court's view that the prosecutor's use of strikes was based upon required non-racial grounds. See U.S. v. Matthews, 803 F.2d 325, 332 (7th Cir. 1987).

Additionally, the nature of this selection process is one involving many, many aspects of each venireman. The possible permutations are mind-boggling. While each side has marshalled numbers stricken on this or that basis, in point of fact, it is the unique combination of factors that makes a venireman more or less desirable; a comparison in that manner is infinitely more complex than the already complex comparison of many separate attributes among an entire group of people.

Next, the Court notes that the reasons given “need not rise to the level justifying exercise of a challenge for cause.” Batson, at 1723. Further, to use the terminology of Gamble, the Defendant’s prima facie showing was not strong, thus it may be more readily rebutted. Gamble, 257 Ga. at 327.

While the defense argues in its brief that the prosecutor indulged in “100 percent discrimination,” this is not correct. In Gamble, the disparity between blacks and whites was determined by computing the percentage of blacks on the panel of 42, and using that percentage as the basis for assigning a percentage to represent the disparity. Using that method yields 7.1 percent ($3/42 = 0.071428571$, or 7.1 percent), as the defense has not challenged the state’s strike of Mrs. Hardge. This figure is far below the level in Gamble, though Gamble was almost a worst-case scenario. (If the striking of Mrs. Hardge had been challenged, the figure would have been 9.5 percent ($4/42 = 0.095238095$, or 9.5 percent), still far below the 23.8 percent level in Gamble.) Further, unlike the prosecutor in Gamble, the state in this case offered many legitimate reasons for its strikes of the black jurors.

Moving to the first challenged strike, that of venireman Eddie Hood (venireman number 9):

The defense recounted that venireman Hood read the local paper, knew about the Defendant's earlier escape, but did not know the defense witnesses, the Defendant's family, or the victim's family, and did not think his knowledge about the escape could hurt the state's case [Trial Transcript at 1354].

The prosecution's response, although conceding that Mr. Hood was in the age range wanted, included a welter of factors which rationally militated against choosing this particular juror to sit on the panel. Most persuasive to the Court was, first, that Mr. Hood had a son close to the age of the Defendant who had been convicted of theft-by-taking. Cf. U.S. v. Cartlidge, 808 Fed 2d 1064, 1071 (5th Cir. 1987). Further, the facts available indicated that this son lived at home. An apprehension that this would tend to, perhaps only subconsciously, make the venireman sympathetic to the Defendant was a rational one. See U.S. v. Forbes, 816 Fed. 2d 1006. While the defense asserts that the state used different standards for the white jurors, insofar as many of them had children near the age of the Defendant, the Court believes that the conviction is a distinction that makes the difference. (Venireman Martha Duncan, number 88, the state failed to strike despite her nephew's conviction of armed robbery. The defense argues that this shows shifting standards, however, the Court must disagree. A person's feelings for a son are ordinarily much stronger than for a nephew; one's interest in a person living under one's own roof is ordinarily much stronger than one's interest in someone living in another town.)

This venireman had become ill during voir dire, and had to be hospitalized. While he was available and seemed well on the day of jury selection, it is understandable that the state would not want to take a chance on his continued good health. As it was, one juror was excused after the start of the trial due to illness.

The prosecution stated that Mr. Hood's religion was a factor, too, because their experience in trying death penalty cases (approximately 22 between the two prosecutors trying the case) indicated to them that members of his church, the Church of Christ, were more likely to have difficulty imposing the death penalty. The state also had reservations about Roman Catholics. The Court notes that of those prospective veniremen excused for cause, 12 indicated they would not vote for the death penalty. The numbers here break down as follows:

Three (3) were Roman Catholics.

Three (3) were Methodists.

Two (2) were Church of Christ members.

One (1) was a Baptist.

One (1) identified himself as both Baptist and Methodist.

One (1) was a member of the Church of God.

One (1) had no religious affiliation.

The Court finds very credible the state's concern regarding religious affiliation.

Also, Mr. Hood's wife was a supervisor in the food service department at Northwest Georgia Regional Hospital. The defense planned to set up defenses of mental illness and insanity. The defense argues that this factor does not hold up in light of the strikes of white veniremen; that a white venireman was kept who had been connected with the same hospital in the past. However, the Court is convinced that the same factor may have more or less influence with one individual than with another, depending on the presence or absence of other factors. This is not an unusual concept, and the Court declines to analyze human beings as disconnected parts with disconnected attributes as the defense invites it to do. In any event, knowing ignorance of what kind of exposure and discussions Mr. Hood had with his wife concerning patients there, and what kind of impressions such may have had, the decision to forego the risk is an understandable one. Fortunately, on voir dire counsel cannot watch a videotape of the venireman's entire life before determining strikes. To go into depth about all the areas both sides were concerned about could literally have taken years. Perfect knowledge is not possible, and if sought, can only lead to disappointment.

Finally, the state believed that Mr. Hood was soft-spoken and slow in responding to the death penalty questions. The Court notes that his particular confusion about the death penalty questions was not unusual. In light of the fact that the death penalty was being sought, however, the Court again finds the state's explanation to be credible. Individuals on this jury were to face a very difficult decision, the state would get no "second bite at the apple," and thus, a desire for "strong jurors" was completely understandable.

The state's peremptory strike of Mrs. Evelyn Hardge (venireman number 22) is not challenged by the defense, and the Court agrees that the state had ample reason to excuse her.

The state's peremptory strike of Mrs. Mary Turner (venireman number 38) has been challenged by the defense. The defense alleges that the state used Mrs. Turner's affiliation with Northwest Georgia Regional Hospital as a "sham" reason, to cover racially discriminatory intent. The Court finds this reason somewhat weak in the particular case of Mrs. Turner; however, in Mrs. Turner's case the prosecution gave other reasons which satisfy the Court that she was struck for race neutral reasons. As the Gamble court instructs, a court determining the question at hand "may be less troubled by one relatively weak explanation for striking a black juror when all the remaining explanations are persuasive than where several of the prosecutor's proffered justifications are questionable." Gamble, 257 Ga. at 327.

The district attorney, Stephen Lanier, during the course of this action, has explained that he consulted with Mr. Douglas Pullen, Mr. Clayton Lundy and others to determine his strikes. Mr. Lundy, the state's chief investigator, by his own affidavit and by the district attorney's admission, advised against selecting this particular venireman. Mr. Lundy stated he advised against selecting her because of what he thought her inclinations would be as a result of facts which she conspicuously omitted in her answer to an important question. Specifically, Mrs. Turner answered question number 32 of the questionnaire in the negative. Question number 32 asks:

Do you have a close friend or relative who has been accused or convicted of a crime of violence? (If so, state the offense, the date of conviction, sentence imposed or if the charges were dismissed.)

The district attorney stated that the prospective juror had a step-brother, Mr. Otis Turner, who had a criminal history. In her affidavit submitted by the defense as Exhibit A to its "Argument" in support of the motion for a new trial, she states that Mr. Turner is her brother-in-law, and that she did not list the charges against him because she "did not interpret burglary convictions as crimes of violence." The state, in its "Brief in Response to Defendant's Batson Argument for a New Trial,” attached an Exhibit B which shows that in May of 1986 Mr. Turner was indicted for aggravated assault (with a baseball bat) and burglary. In September of 1986, a nolle prosequi was entered on this indictment. In addition, the investigator knew that her husband also had a criminal history, and she did not mention him, either. In light of these facts, the investigator did not believe she could be a fair and impartial juror in this case. Under these circumstances, the Court finds credible the state’s unease with this venireman.

Further, there appears to be some private disagreement between the prosecutor’s chief investigator, Mr. Clayton Lundy, and this venireman. Mrs. Turner claims she and Mr. Lundy are half-brother and half-sister, while Mr. Lundy states in his affidavit that this is not the case. Mr. Lundy actively assisted with the prosecution of this case; this kind of friction could not have been conducive to that prosecution.

The state also expressed concern about eye contact between this venireman and the Defendant. If as a result of this observation the prosecutors believed that there was a certain rapport between this venireman and the Defendant and defense counsel, then, as a strategic matter the state should have struck the venireman as it did. While the defense suggests to the Court that it should “flatly reject” this concern of the prosecution, it declines to do so. Cf. U.S. v. Mathews, 803 Fed 2d 325, 331 (7th Cir. 1986). As the defense has related in its brief, Mr. Hood was said to have no eye contact, Mrs. Garrett looked at the ground, and Mrs. Turner kept eye contact with the Defendant. The defense states that the prosecution has failed to explain the correct way for a venireman to look, and speculates that all that is left is looking at the ceiling. This hyperbole fails to note the obvious: looking at the state's attorneys would be the "correct" way. The defense has insisted that "body language" is important in the selection of a jury (Trial Transcript at 107), and the Court must agree; further, it is just as important to the state as the defense, and the Court rules on that basis.

The final peremptory which the defense challenges is that exercised by the state against Mrs. Marilyn Garrett (venireman number 86). The state indicated that it was "bothered" by her association with Head Start because that program deals with "low-income, underprivileged" children (Trial Transcript at 1375). As the defense counsel informed the Court before voir dire, they were trying to find jurors who possessed some empathy, or could possess some empathy, for the "socially, culturally and educationally deprived life-style" of the Defendant (Trial Transcript at 85 – 89). Given this, the prosecutor's strike was sound.

The state's investigator also recommended that this juror not be selected. Although it is unclear when the district attorney knew the reasons for his investigator's advice, it is clear the investigator believed that Mrs. Garrett's relationship with a Miss Angela Garrett was a cause for concern. Miss Garrett had just recently lost her teaching and coaching job due to a violation of the Georgia Controlled Substances Act, and the investigator was concerned about this connection.

In addition, the state thought that the venireman's own financial situation might have made her more likely to identify with the Defendant. While the Court believes there is room for disagreement on its likelihood, the Court also believes that the state is honest in voicing its concern that the combination of holding down two jobs and being the divorced mother of two indicates a less stable home environment [sic], and acknowledges that that was the prime defense in this case. Cf. Cartledge, 808 Fed. 2d at 1071; Evans v. State, 183 Ga. App. 436, 440 (1987).

Again, the defense's questioning of this prospective juror was abbreviated; that the state took note of that fact and reacted is hardly surprising.

Further, as the district attorney suggested, jury selection can be likened to a game of chess: decisions now affect the existence of options later. The morning of jury selection, Mrs. Powell, venireman number 67, was excused for cause because she had discovered over the weekend that close friends of hers were related to the Defendant, and she could not be fair and impartial. Mrs. Powell had expressed great hesitation over the death penalty. In its brief, the state explained that her excusal changed the dynamics of choosing this jury: venireman Cadle, substituted for venireman Powell, was acceptable to the state. As a result of this movement, one of the state's planned strikes for jurors was rendered unnecessary. Therefore, the state had an opportunity to be slightly more selective about its “keeps” than it had anticipated.

The state indicates that at this point it had two “questionables” left in the panel, and as far as it knew, one strike left uncommitted: Veniremen Blackmon and Garrett. The state’s position is that venireman Blackmon (number 83) was a better choice than venireman Garrett, despite her affiliation with the Catholic church, and her past employment with Northwest Georgia Regional Hospital. (The Court notes that this argument is not invalid because the state used only nine of its 10 strikes. It had reserved a strike for venireman Grindstaff due to her serious reservations about the death penalty. The state could not know in advance that the jury would be selected before she was reached.) In comparing these two, the state noted that Mrs. Blackmon listed her church attendance as “irregular,” that her answers on the insanity question were much more favorable to the state’s position than Mrs. Garrett’s, her home environment appeared more stable (she had been married for over 13 years), and she had no ties to any groups whose purpose was to aid “disadvantaged youth.”

In the totality of the circumstances surrounding venireman Garrett, the Court finds credible the prosecuting attorney’s position that there was no discriminatory intent, and that there existed reasonably clear, specific, and legitimate reasons for excusal of this prospective juror.

The Defendant's eighth enumeration argues that the Court erred by charging the jury that the Defendant had to prove he was mentally ill beyond a reasonable doubt. However, the case of Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 188 (1984), is directly on point, and the Court is bound by that case.

Defendant's ninth enumeration of error is the failure to give Defendant's request to charge number 13 on the effect of intoxicants on criminal intent, from Pope v. State, 256 Ga. 196, 208 (1986). The Pope case does not stand for the proposition that charges on voluntary intoxication and incapacity to form intent must be given together, which is what the defense seemed to suggest at trial (Trial Transcript at 2441). Indeed, the court in that case was responding to a defendant's argument that such a combination in charge was error because it was "hopelessly contradictory." Pope, 256 Ga. at 208. The court in Pope found that the combination was not error, and never addressed any question as to whether the combination challenged was required. As this is the case, the Court finds this enumeration without merit.

Wherefore, the Defendant's motion for a new trial is denied.

So ordered this 2nd day of February, 1988.

v.

The STATE.

No. 45609. | Nov. 22, 1988. | Reconsideration
Denied Dec. 14, 1988.

James C. Wyatt, Robert K. Finnell, Rome, for Timothy Tyrone foster [sic].

David L. Lomenick, Jr., Dist. Atty., David J. Dunn, Jr., Scott K. Camp, Asst. Dist. Attys., Stephen F. Lanier, Dist. Atty., Rome, Michael J. Bowers, Atty. Gen., Paula K. Smith, Asst. Atty. Gen., for the State.

MARSHALL, Chief Justice.

This is a death-penalty case. Queen Madge White, a 79-year-old widow, lived by herself in Rome, Georgia. Early in the evening of August 27, 1986, a friend took White to choir practice, and brought her home at 8:30 p.m. White talked to her sister by telephone at 9:00 p.m. and everything was normal. However, when the sister stopped by early the next morning, she discovered that White's house had been broken into and ransacked. The sister called the police, who found White's body lying on the floor in her bedroom covered to her chin by a blanket. Her face was coated with talcum powder. Her jaw was broken. She had a severe gash on the top of her head. She had been sexually molested with a salad-dressing bottle, and strangled to death. A number of her possessions were missing from her home.

The appellant, Timothy Tyrone Foster, was arrested for White's murder a month later when he threatened his live-in companion and she responded by turning him in. The victim's possessions were recovered from their home and from Foster's two sisters. Foster was interrogated and confessed. A jury convicted him of malice murder and burglary, and sentenced him to death. This is his appeal.¹

1. Foster first contends the trial court erred by excusing one prospective juror and by failing to excuse eight prospective jurors.

Prospective juror Black was excused because of her views against capital punishment. The test for excusal is "whether the juror's views [on capital punishment] would 'prevent or substantially impair the performance of his duties as a juror in accordance with his instructions and his oath.'" Wainwright v. Witt, 469 U.S. 412, 424, 105 S.Ct. 844, 852, 83 L.Ed.2d 841 (1985). See Alderman v. State, 254 Ga. 206(4), 327 S.E.2d 168 (1985).

Black's answers to questions about the death penalty, like those of many other prospective jurors, were somewhat contradictory. See Curry v. State, 255

¹ The crime occurred August 27, 1986. Foster was arrested September 26 and indicted on October 17, 1986. The case was tried April 20 through May 1, 1987. A motion for new trial was filed May 28, 1987 and heard November 24, 1987. The trial court denied the motion on February 3, 1988. A notice of appeal was filed March 3, 1988, and the case was docketed in this court on March 21, 1988. Oral arguments were heard June 6, 1988.

Ga. 215, 220, 336 S.E.2d 762 (1985). As she pointed out, she had never before been asked to express her views on capital punishment. See Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 197 (fn. 3), 319 S.E.2d 420 (1984). She did state, however, that, although she “maybe” could change her mind, she was opposed to the death penalty, and she stated repeatedly that she would automatically vote for a life sentence in a murder case. The trial court’s finding that she was disqualified is not clearly erroneous. Wainwright v. Witt, supra 469 U.S. at 431, 105 S.Ct. at 856.²

Foster contends that prospective juror Tate should have been excused because he initially stated that he would vote automatically to impose a death sentence if the defendant were convicted, and because he had formed an opinion that the police had “probably got the right man” when they arrested Foster. However, it is clear that Tate was confused at first by the question about the automatic imposition of the death penalty.³ Further questioning cleared up the confusion and showed no disqualification in this respect. Compare Pope v. State, 256 Ga. 195(7f), 345 S.E.2d 831 (1986). The previously-formed opinion as to guilt was not so “fixed and definite” as to necessitate an excusal for cause. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243(8), 357 S.E.2d 48 (1987). Tate stated repeatedly that he could set aside his opinion, and decide the case strictly on the evidence. Spivey v. State, supra 253 Ga. at 196-7, 319 S.E.2d 420.

² We note that Black gave inconsistent answers to several attempts to ask a question in the exact language of the Witt test for excusal. Although the standard enunciated in Witt is the test for excusal, it is not necessarily the best or most comprehensible voir dire question. As is noted in Witt: “Relevant voir dire questions addressed to this issue [of death-qualification] need not be framed exclusively in the language of the controlling appellate opinion; the opinion is, after all, an opinion and not an intricate devise in a will.” Id. 469 U.S. at 433-34, 105 S.Ct. at 857.

Foster also contends that prospective juror Holder should have been excused for his views on the death penalty. Any death-qualification issue here is moot, since this prospective juror was excused on other grounds.

Foster complains of the refusal to excuse six additional prospective jurors on the ground of bias. Some of these prospective jurors knew the victim, but none were close to her, and they all testified that they could be fair and impartial jurors and could decide the case on the evidence presented. The trial court did not err by overruling Foster’s challenges for favor. Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630(4b), 300 S.E.2d 640 (1983).

2. The voir dire examination concluded on a Friday afternoon. The jury was selected Monday morning, giving the parties the weekend to plan their peremptory challenges. The qualified panel from which the jury was selected included four blacks. The district attorney exercised peremptory challenges against each of the four black jurors. Foster timely raised an issue of racial discrimination in the prosecution's exercise of peremptory challenges. See Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 106 S.Ct. 1712, 90 L.Ed.2d 69 (1986). The trial court ruled that a prima facie case had been established, and required the prosecutor to explain his exercise of peremptory challenges. See Gamble v. State, 257 Ga. 325(2), 357 S.E.2d 792 (1987). Foster contends the trial court erred by finding that the state successfully rebutted the prima facie case. As we stated in Gamble (quoting from Batson):

The [prosecutor's] explanation [of his peremptory challenges] "need not rise to the level justifying exercise of a challenge for cause," but it must be "neutral," "related to the case to be tried," and a "'clear and reasonably specific,' explanation of his 'legitimate reasons' for exercising the challenges." [Cit.]

Gamble, supra at 327, 357 S.E.2d 792.

The defense in this case centered around Foster's deprived background and his use of drugs and alcohol. Many of the defendant's witnesses were social workers. Part of his defense was that when he was a juvenile he had not been committed to a Youth Development Center for the commission of armed robbery, notwithstanding the contemporaneous recommendation of a psychiatrist that only incarceration and strict discipline could possibly have any “lasting impact” on his anti-social behavior. Instead, he was returned by the state to an unsuitable and harmful family environment which included heavy drug use by his own parents and a girlfriend who “sold [her] body” for cocaine. Foster contended he was mentally ill and, further, that he was involuntarily intoxicated by alcohol, marijuana and cocaine.

The prosecutor was familiar with Foster’s background and knew that Foster intended to assert a defense involving mental illness and drug usage. He explained his challenges of the four black prospective jurors as follows, taking them in the order in which they underwent voir dire:

The first juror has a son the same age as the defendant who has been convicted of a misdemeanor theft offense. His wife works at the Northwest Georgia Regional Hospital, a mental health facility. His brother was once a drug consultant. During the Witherspoon questioning, the juror appeared to be reluctant to say that he could vote for a death sentence, and he is a member of a church whose members, in the experience of the prosecutor, tend to be very reluctant to impose the death penalty.

The defendant concedes the prosecutor was justified in striking the second juror, who, among other things, had talked to the defendant’s mother before entering the courtroom.

The third juror claimed to be the half-sister of the district attorney's chief investigator (who is black). The investigator, however, denied being related in any way to this juror. Moreover, the juror denied having a friend or relative accused or convicted of a crime of violence and denied knowing anyone with a drug or alcohol problem notwithstanding that her brother is a repeat offender whose crimes involve theft by taking, burglary and drugs, and that her husband has been convicted for carrying a concealed weapon.

The fourth juror is a social worker involved with low-income, underprivileged children. Her first cousin was arrested by the Metro Drug Task force on serious drug charges and the cousin lost her job as a consequence.

The prosecutor explained that he did not want social workers on the jury in a death penalty case, as they tended to sympathize with criminal defendants, especially at the penalty phase. Moreover he preferred not to allow on the jury anyone who was closely related to someone with a drug or alcohol problem, since the defendant in this case planned to blame the crime on his own drug and alcohol problem. He further stated that he could not trust someone who gave materially untruthful answers on voir dire, as did the third juror. Finally, he was prepared to challenge peremptorily any juror who was reluctant to impose the death penalty as a matter of conscience where the juror's opposition to the death penalty did not rise to the level justifying a disqualification for cause.

The prosecutor's explanations were related to the case to be tried, and were clear and reasonably specific. The trial court did not err by finding them to be sufficiently neutral and legitimate. The court's determination that the prosecutor successfully rebutted the prima facie case is entitled to "great deference," Batson supra, 106 S.Ct. at 1724 (fn. 21) and is not clearly erroneous in this case.

3. There was no abuse of discretion in the court's conduct of the week-long voir dire examination of prospective jurors. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243(6), 357 S.E.2d 48 (1987).

4. The trial court did not err by denying Foster's post-trial motion to review in camera the state's jury-selection notes. An attorney's work product is generally non-discoverable. A defendant's right to exculpatory evidence under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S.Ct. 1194, 10 L.Ed.2d 215 (1963), is not involved here, and non-exculpatory information in an attorney's work product does not become discoverable simply because the opposing attorneys might find it strategically useful.

5. There was no error in the trial court's denial of funds for expert assistance to examine fingerprints, shoe prints and blood spatters. Roseboro v. State, 258 Ga. 39(3), 365 S.E.2d 115 (1988); Crawford v. State, 257 Ga. 681(5), 362 S.E.2d 201 (1987).

6. The evidence presented by the defendant in support of his motion for change of venue does not show such an inundation of pretrial publicity as would give rise to a presumption of prejudice. Compare Coleman v. Kemp, 778 F.2d 1487 (11th Cir.1985). The voir dire examination and qualification of prospective jurors support the trial court's determination that a change of venue was unnecessary. Lee v. State, 258 Ga. 82(9), 365 S.E.2d 99 (1988).

7. On the day the crime was discovered, an investigator equipped with a video camera filmed the crime scene. The resulting videotape depicts the exterior of the victim's home (including the window through which the defendant entered), the path which he apparently took from the house (dropping things along the way and leaving footprints), the interior of the victim's home (and the extent to which it had been ransacked), and, finally, the victim's body (before and after the removal of the blanket covering her).

The trial court overruled Foster's objection that the videotape was inflammatory and duplicative of the still photographs of the scene and of the body which the state also introduced in evidence.

The videotape clearly was relevant. There was no abuse of discretion in the court's ruling. Hicks v. State, 256 Ga. 715(13), 352 S.E.2d 762 (1987); Jones v. State, 250 Ga. 498(3), 299 S.E.2d 549 (1983).

8. Foster was interrogated by the police on the afternoon of the day he was arrested. Mike Reynolds, the lead investigator, testified it was “the first time I had ever talked with [Foster] . . . [and] I really didn’t expect a confession, [so] I didn’t turn any of the video equipment on.” However, after being advised of his rights, Foster confessed. Reynolds “didn’t want to stop him . . . to go turn everything on,” so he let him confess, and this first confession was not recorded.

Reynolds showed Foster the crime scene photographs. Foster denied raping the victim, but admitted molesting her with a salad-dressing bottle. Foster stated that he took the air-conditioner out of one of the bedroom windows, set it on the ground, and entered the house. He found some suitcases and began filling them. He found two pocketbooks and searched them for valuables. The victim woke up and went to the bathroom, without turning on any lights. Then, Foster stated, she returned to her bedroom and, turning on the lamp by her bed, saw the defendant for the first time, in the living room. She came into the living room armed with a knife, and chased Foster around the living room chair. He got a piece of wood from beside the fireplace and hit her on the head. After being hit, she ran to the bedroom and fell to the floor. Foster denied strangling the victim, claiming that he had merely wrapped a sheet around her neck. He admitted dumping white powder on her, “because it cools the body off.” He could not explain why he “stuck” the salad-dressing bottle “up her,” but he covered her body with a blanket so he would not have to look at her. He left by the back door, and hid what he had taken in a nearby empty house until he could return for it the next day.

After giving the above statement, Reynolds tried to persuade Foster to confess a second time with the video recording equipment turned on. Reynolds testified Foster “was a little hesitant about confessing a second time.” He and detective Craft spent “eight or nine minutes . . . trying to talk him into confessing to us a second time.” Foster expressed concern that he might not say exactly the same thing the second time. The officers assured him that they were not trying to “trap” or “trick” him, and that “it would be better just to put it on tape . . . and it will be correct.” The interview continued:

Craft: Just tell us again on tape one more time. It ain’t going to hurt nothing.

Foster: Why can’t we just leave it at that?

Reynolds: If . . . you want to leave it at this and not put it on tape, that is fine with me. . . . Let’s just leave it. What this means is that Wayne and I are going to have to sit up all night long and write about you.

Craft: Yeah. But if we put it on tape can’t nobody change what the tape says, you know. Okay? This is – this is as much for your benefit as it is ours . . . so let’s just go through it right quick one more time and get it over with . . . Okay?

Reynolds: Tim, I haven’t lied to you through the whole night, and I haven’t tried to trick you through the whole night, and I am not trying now. . . . [Y]ou [sat] in here and told two police officers everything about it. . . . I am not trying to push you or bluff you or anything. It will just make it a lot easier on all of us.

Craft: Tim, let's go ahead and get this thing over with tonight. You told us about it already one time. Okay? Hey, let's run back through it right quick and get it over with and be done with it. Okay? . . . Do you want to do that? It ain't going to hurt, not a thing.

Craft: [Y]ou told us about it one time already. It ain't going to hurt, you know. I mean I think you will agree that it ain't going to hurt, you know, for us to run back through it again right quick. . . .

Thus encouraged, Foster was interviewed a second time on videotape. His second confession was identical in all material respects with the first.

(a) Foster contends first that his confessions were induced by a "hope of benefit," OCGA § 24-3-50, because he was informed that he would not be charged with rape. There is no merit to this contention. Foster was simply told that no rape would be charged, based on his statement that no rape occurred. No benefit was offered to induce a confession.

(b) Foster contends further that it was error to admit the second statement in evidence because it was elicited only after he was told repeatedly that it was not going to hurt “a thing,” and that it would be “as much for your benefit as ours.” We agree. An accused must be warned that anything he says can and will be used against him in court. Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S.Ct. 1602, 16 L.Ed.2d 694 (1966). Telling him that a confession is not going to hurt and, on the contrary, will benefit him as much as the police, is not consistent with the warnings required by Miranda.

Nevertheless, there is no reversible error. The videotaped confession was merely cumulative to the first, non-recorded confession, and that confession and the remaining evidence overwhelmingly establish Foster’s guilt. Any error here is harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Vaughn v. State, 248 Ga. 127(2), 281 S.E.2d 594 (1981).

9. A defense psychiatrist testified that Foster was so intoxicated from the ingestion of alcohol, marijuana and cocaine that he did not know the difference between right and wrong at the time of the crime. He also testified that Foster has an anti-social personality disorder, but that when he is sober he is neither insane nor mentally ill under Georgia law.

On cross-examination, the prosecutor asked the psychiatrist if it was true that most people in prison have an anti-social personality disorder. The psychiatrist agreed that it was true. Then the state asked:

So any one of those people that took cocaine and marijuana and beer in the quantities by his story that you say that this defendant took it, would be entitled to walk out of the courtroom as found acquitted on the basis of insanity. Is that what you're saying?

Foster objected and moved for a mistrial. The trial court denied the mistrial, but sustained the objection and instructed the jury to disregard the question. The court did not err by refusing to declare a mistrial.

10. The court charged on voluntary and involuntary intoxication as follows:

Our law provides that voluntary intoxication shall not be an excuse for any criminal act. It provides further that if a person's mind when unexcited by intoxicants is capable of distinguishing between right and wrong and reason and acting rationally, and he voluntarily deprives himself of reason by consuming intoxicants and while under the influence of such intoxicants, he commits a criminal act, he is criminally responsible for such act to the same extent as if he were sober. Whether or not the defendant was voluntarily intoxicated at or during the time alleged in this indictment is a matter solely for you, the jury, to determine.

A person shall not be found guilty of a crime when, at the time of the conduct constituting the crime, the person, because of involuntary intoxication, did not have sufficient mental capacity to distinguish between right and wrong in relation to the criminal act.

Involuntary intoxication means intoxication caused by (a) consumption of a substance through excusable ignorance, or (b) the coercion, fraud, artifice or contrivance of another person.

These instructions set forth the principles contained in OCGA § 16-3-4.

Foster contends the court erred by refusing his request to charge in addition:

If, because of the influence of alcohol, drugs, or narcotics, one's mind becomes so impaired as to render him incapable of forming an intent to do the act charged, or to understand that a certain consequence would likely result from it, he would not be criminally responsible for the act.

The law of intoxication contained in OCGA § 16-3-4 must be read in light of OCGA § 16-3-2, which provides:

A person shall not be found guilty of a crime if, at the time of the act, omission, or negligence constituting the crime, the person did not have mental capacity to distinguish between right and wrong in relation to such act, omission or negligence.

OCGA § 16-3-4 limits the reach of OCGA § 16-3-2 so that the inability to distinguish between right and wrong is not a defense if the inability is a consequence of voluntary intoxication (but remains a defense if the inability is a consequence of involuntary intoxication).

Neither code section speaks of an inability to form an intent to commit the act. Persons are not excused from criminal liability under either of these code sections because they are incapable of forming criminal intent. As we observed in Pope v. State, 256 Ga. 195 at 208, 345 S.E.2d 831 (1986), a person can be capable of forming an intent to kill but incapable of understanding the difference between right and wrong.⁴ Lack of intent is a defense, but it is not implicated by either OCGA § 16-3-2 or OCGA § 16-3-4. In Jones v. State, 29 Ga. 594(2) (1860), this court explained:

[T]he minimum of mind which can furnish the necessary mental element in crime, is a far smaller quantity than was claimed by the argument for the accused. . . .

Whoever . . . has mind enough to form the simple intention to kill a human being, has mind enough to have malice, and to furnish the mental constituents of murder. . . .

And this brings [us] to a consideration of the great perversions which have been made of the doctrine that drunkenness is no excuse for crime. The foundation stone of these perversions, not distinctly shaped in the argument, but unconsciously assumed in it, is a feeling or notion that the exemption of insane persons and young children from criminal responsibility, is not the result of positive law excusing them, but is the simple consequence of their mental deficiency, which is supposed to be so complete as not to be capable of furnishing the mental element of crime; while the drunken man, with the same actual mental deficiency, is held responsible for his actions, not because they are crimes having the mental and physical element of crime, but by virtue of a certain destructive capacity infused into him, from reasons of policy, by the law which declares that drunkenness shall be no excuse for crime. The reverse of all this is the true philosophy of the law. The law deals with all of these classes of people, as having a sufficient quantum of mind to have bad passions, and evil intentions, and carelessness in their actions, and so to furnish the mental element of crime, but as laboring also under an infirmity of reason, which serves to betray them into these evil intentions and carelessness, and at the same time breaks down this power of resisting temptation. The law comes in then, and excuses the young and the insane, out of tenderness towards an infirmity which is involuntary, and at the same time, to guard against the possibility that men might make the same excuse whenever there is the same infirmity of reason, the law takes special care to exclude drunken men from the excuse, because their infirmity is voluntary.

The result is, that the young and the involuntarily insane occupy a platform of their own, by virtue of an exception made in their favor, while the voluntary insanity of drunkenness being excluded from the exception, stands just as if no exception had been made, and the drunk man and sober man occupy the same great platform of responsibility for the crimes which they commit. . . .

Id. at 609-10.

Foster's requested charge is misleading, because it implies that the intoxication defense involves a lack of intent to commit the crime, when intent is, in fact, a separate issue.

The trial court charged on intent, including the state's burden to prove intent beyond a reasonable doubt. The court did not err by refusing to give in addition the defendant's requested charge on inability to form intent as a result of intoxication. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814(13), 279 S.E.2d 650 (1981).

11. “The statutory provision that . . . mental illness be proved beyond a reasonable doubt is not constitutionally infirm. [Cit.]” Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 189, 319 S.E.2d 420 (1984).

12. The state urged the presence of two statutory aggravating circumstances at the sentencing phase of the trial: (1) the murder was committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of burglary, and (2) the murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible or inhuman in that it involved torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim. OCGA § 17-10-30(b)(2) and (b)(7). The court’s charge included an instruction that if the jury should find the § b(7) circumstance, its verdict should specify which of the three elements of § b(7) – torture, depravity of mind, or an aggravated battery – the jury found. See West v. State, 252 Ga. 156, 162 (Appendix), 313 S.E.2d 67 (1984).

A type-written verdict form was submitted to the jury as follows:

The following aggravated circumstances as to Murder has [sic] been submitted by the State of Georgia and must have been proved to the satisfaction of the jury beyond a reasonable doubt before a verdict recommending the death penalty is authorized, to wit.

1. The offense of murder was committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of Burglary.
2. The offense of murder was outrageously or wantonly vile, horrible, or inhuman in that it involved torture, depravity of mind or an aggravated battery to the victim.

The jury will answer the following questions:

1. Did you find beyond a reasonable doubt the aggravated circumstances to exist as to the murder?
2. If so, write the aggravated circumstances below as to murder.
3. As to murder: (A) We the jury recommend the death penalty. YES (☐) NO (☐)
 B. We the jury recommend Life Imprisonment. YES (☐) NO (☐)

The jury filled in the form by writing “yes” after the first question, and by writing after the second question:

Torture – powdered body, eyes & nose, salad bottle in vagina, strangulation

Depravity of mind – powdered body, salad bottle in vagina, strangulation

Aggravated battery – hit with stick (log) disfigured face, strangulation

Finally, the jury checked “yes” to 3(A) and drew a line through 3(B).

The jury convicted Foster of burglary and answered “yes” to the question whether it had found beyond a reasonable doubt the proffered “aggravated circumstances” (plural), one of which was burglary. However, the jury failed to list burglary in the space provided under the second “question”. Although it is likely that the jury meant to find that the commission of the offense of burglary was a statutory aggravating circumstance of the murder, we cannot be sure that the jury intended to do so, and we shall not consider burglary as a statutory circumstance supporting the imposition of a death sentence. OCGA § 17-10-30(c).

That leaves the § b(7) circumstance. Since no one at trial objected to the form of the verdict, the question here is not whether the form of the verdict might be objectionable, but whether “the jury’s intent [was] shown with sufficient clarity that this court can rationally review the jury’s finding.” Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 213, 305 S.E.2d 93 (1983). We are satisfied that the jury intended to find the § b(7) circumstance in its entirety and to follow the trial court’s instructions by specifying in particular that it had found each of the three principal elements of § b(7). See Hance v. State, 245 Ga. 856(3), 268 S.E.2d 339 (1980).

The evidence showed that Foster hit the victim with a fireplace log hard enough to break her jaw, sexually molested her, poured talcum powder all over her face, and then strangled her to death. The jury’s § b(7) finding is supported by the evidence. OCGA § 17-10-35(c)(2). Compare Phillips v. State, 250 Ga. 336(6), 297 S.E.2d 217 (1982).

13. The death sentence was not imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice or other arbitrary factor, and is neither excessive nor disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases, considering both the crime and the defendant. OCGA § 17-10-35(c)(1) and (c)(3). The similar cases listed in the Appendix support the imposition of a death sentence in this case.

JUDGMENT AFFIRMED.

ORDER DENYING PETITIONER'S REQUEST FOR HABEAS RELIEF

After consideration of the record, applicable law, the briefs, arguments, and evidence submitted by the parties, and after having held an evidentiary hearing in this matter, this court finds and orders as follows:

Petitioner, Timothy Tyrone Foster, was convicted by a jury in the Superior Court of Floyd County of one count of malice murder and one count of burglary on May 1, 1987. The Petitioner was thereafter sentenced to death for the malice murder of Queen Madge White. In addition to the death sentence, the trial court sentenced Petitioner to twenty years for burglary.

On direct appeal, the Georgia Supreme Court affirmed Mr. Foster's convictions and death sentence. Foster v. State, 258 Ga. 736 (1988). Mr. Foster's Motion for Reconsideration was denied. The United States Supreme Court denied certiorari. Foster v. Georgia, 490 U.S. 1085 (1989); rehearing denied 492 U.S. 928 (1989). Mr. Foster then filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in this court. In response, the court granted a limited remand for a mental retardation trial and held the remainder of the petition in abeyance. At the mental retardation trial, which was held in Floyd County in 1999, the jury found that Mr. Foster was not mentally retarded. Mr. Foster's Motion for New Trial was denied by the trial court. On appeal, the Georgia Supreme Court affirmed. Foster v. State, 272 Ga. 69, 525 S.E.2d 78 (2000). The United States Supreme Court denied certiorari. Foster v. Georgia, 531 U.S. 890 (2000); rehearing denied 531 U.S. 1045 (2000).¹

After the mental retardation trial, Mr. Foster amended the remainder of his habeas petition several times, and this court held an evidentiary hearing on October 30-31, 2006, see Hearing Transcript, pages 1-169. At the hearing, the court received evidence in the form of live testimony, affidavits, deposition transcripts, and other exhibits. The court then invited the parties to submit written objections, post-hearing briefs, and proposed final orders.

Petitioner's Objection to State's Exhibits

Both parties filed written objections. On May 17, 2010, Mr. Foster objected to the admission of 145 exhibits introduced by the State for lack of authentication. The State did not respond to Mr. Foster's objection. The court has reviewed Mr. Foster's objection and the submitted exhibits, and in exercising its broad authority to admit such evidence, has decided to overrule the Petitioner's objection and admit the State's exhibits.

Respondent's Objection to Petitioner's Affidavits

On July 16, 2010, the State objected to several of the affidavits filed by Mr. Foster on grounds such as relevance, speculation, and hearsay. On August 16, 2010, Mr. Foster responded to the State's objections. The court agrees that the State's objections go to the weight, not the admissibility, of the affidavits. See McElroy v. Williams Bros. Motors, 104 Ga. App. 435, 437 (1961) ("A judge [sitting without a jury] is not held to the strict rules as to the admission of evidence, and [is] presumptively able to 'sift the wheat from the chaff' . . ."). The court further agrees that the standard practice in Georgia is for habeas corpus courts to admit affidavits into evidence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-14-48(a). Accordingly, Mr. Foster's affidavits in support of his Petition are admitted in their entirety.

Respondent's Motion to Permit the Submission of Affidavit Testimony for Purposes of Clarification Following the Close of Evidence

Also on July 16, 2010, the State filed a Motion to Permit the Submission of Additional Affidavit Testimony. Mr. Foster opposed the motion. Given the untimeliness of the State's submission, this court denies the State's Motion to Permit the Submission of Additional Affidavit Testimony. See State v. Sabillon, 280 Ga. 1, 2 (2005) (holding that the habeas court properly excluded an affidavit submitted by the petitioner after the statutory deadline).

Claims not Reviewable Due to Res Judicata

As a preliminary matter, this court notes that, as cited by the Respondent, the following claims are not reviewable based on the doctrine of res judicata, as the claims were raised and litigated adversely to Petitioner on his direct appeal to the Georgia Supreme Court. Gunter v. Hickman, 256 Ga. 315 (1986); Roulain v. Martin, 266 Ga. 353 (1996).

- Claim XVII of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XVII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim I of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the State used peremptory challenges in a racially discriminatory manner in violation of Batson v. Kentucky, (see Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 737-739(2));

- Claim I of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim I of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim III of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that he is mentally retarded and therefore ineligible for the death penalty. (See Foster v. State, 272 Ga. at 70(1));
- Claim X of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim X of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and that portion of Claim V of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the trial court violated his constitutional rights by failing to provide him with the necessary assistance of competent and independent experts that included expert assistance to examine fingerprint, shoe print and blood spatter evidence. (See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 739(5));
- That portion of Claim VI of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the prosecutor suppressed evidence of the State's use of racial stereotypes in selecting a jury in violation of Brady v. Maryland, (see Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 739(4));
- Claim VII of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that his statements to the police were illegally obtained in violation of his constitutional rights. (See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 740-742(8));

- The portion of Claim VIII of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the trial court erred in admitting the videotape of the scene that the police made the day after the crime. (See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 740(7));
- Claim XIV of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the trial court erred in failing to change venue for Petitioner's trial due to the pretrial publicity surrounding the case and the exposure that numerous jurors had to the publicity. (See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 740(6));
- Claim XXII of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XXIII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XV of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that his constitutional rights were violated by the trial court's restrictions on voir dire. These alleged trial court restrictions include the following:
 - 1) limiting the voir dire of jurors' views on capital punishment and/or their ability to set aside their personal feelings and be impartial, including the voir dire of Myrtle Francis, Ray Tate and Hugh Hubbard;
 - 2) limiting voir dire regarding jurors' ability to impartially receive the testimony from police officers;
 - 3) limiting voir dire on jurors' ability to consider and weigh mitigating evidence at the penalty phase;

- 4) limiting voir dire on jurors' biases and prejudices against individuals who come from a different cultural, economic or social background;
- 5) limiting voir dire on jurors' views about race, the appropriateness of the death penalty for minors, and youth as a potentially mitigating circumstance; and
- 6) limiting voir dire on jurors' views, biases and prior knowledge regarding insanity, mental illness, and drug and alcohol abuse;

To the extent this claim asserts that the trial court erred by allegedly not allowing Petitioner to ask questions during voir dire as to attitudes, race, youth, insanity and mental illness, this claim was addressed and decided adversely to Petitioner on direct appeal. See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 739(3). To the extent Petitioner asserts any other restrictions by the trial court on voir dire, it is procedurally defaulted;

- Claim V of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim V of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XVI of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the trial court improperly failed to excuse jurors for cause who showed a clear bias against Petitioner. These jurors include the following: Mr. Ratliff; Ray Allen Tate; Billy Graves; James T. Cochran; Dorsey Hill; Charles Haulk; Elbert J. Roberson; Linda Kay Fincher; John William Hoban; Margaret Hibbert; Robert Milan; Shirley Jackson; Hugh Hubbard; Pamela Hyde; Leslie Hatch; Virginia Berry; Robert Summners; Walter Fuqua; and A.D. Branton. This claim was addressed and decided adversely to Petitioner on direct appeal. See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 736-737(1). To the extent that this claim was not addressed by the Georgia Supreme Court on direct appeal, this claim is procedurally defaulted and may not be addressed on its merits in this proceeding absent a showing of cause and actual prejudice or of a miscarriage of justice to overcome the procedural default. This court finds that the Petitioner has not met his burden in showing cause and actual prejudice or miscarriage of justice on this issue to overcome default.

- Claim VI of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim VI of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XVII of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the trial court erred in excusing for cause jurors whose views on the death penalty were not extreme enough to warrant exclusion. These jurors include the following: Juror Hines; Dorothy Black; Beverly Kay Richardson; Scott Henson, Jr.; Michael Steve Green; and Lewis Nixon. This claim was addressed and decided adversely to Petitioner on direct appeal. See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 736-737(1). To the extent that this claim was not addressed by the Georgia Supreme Court on direct appeal, this claim is procedurally defaulted and may not be addressed on its merits in this proceeding absent a showing of cause and actual prejudice or of a miscarriage of justice to overcome the procedural default. This court finds that the Petitioner has not met his burden in showing cause and actual prejudice or miscarriage of justice on this issue to overcome default.

- Claim XXIX of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XXX of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XIX of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that he was tried under a statute that mandated he prove his mental illness beyond a reasonable doubt before the jury would be authorized to find him guilty but mentally ill in violation of his constitutional rights. (See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 745(11));
- Claim XIV of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XIV of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XXIV of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the death penalty constitutes cruel and unusual punishment in Georgia in that it is applied in an arbitrary and capricious fashion and pursuant to a pattern and practice of Georgia prosecuting authorities, courts and juries to discriminate on grounds of race, sex and poverty. (See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 747(13));
- Claim XI of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XI of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and that portion of Claim XXV of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that his death sentence is disproportionate. (See Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 747(13)); and
- Claim XL of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XLI of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XXX of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the trial court erred in failing to change venue for Petitioner's mental retardation trial. (See Foster v. State, 272 Ga. at 70(2)).

Claims that are Procedurally Defaulted

This Court finds that Petitioner failed to raise the following claims on direct appeal and has failed to establish cause and actual prejudice, or a miscarriage of justice, sufficient to excuse his procedural default of these claims. Black v. Hardin, 255 Ga. 239 (1985); Valenzuela v. Newsome, 253 Ga. 793 (1985); O.C.G.A. § 9-14-48(d).

- Claim II of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that he was denied his right to a fair trial, an impartial jury, due process, and equal protection as a result of the prosecution's repeated attempts to rely on arguments supported by racial stereotypes;
- Claim III of the amended petition dated 1/4/02 and Claim III of the amended petition dated 1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that the State destroyed unidentified potentially exculpatory evidence, including allegations that the State, through its investigating officers confiscated unidentified critical evidence that was never tested and then allegedly either lost or destroyed;
- Claim IV of the amended petition dated 1/4/02 and Claim IV of the amended petition dated 1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that he was tried while incompetent, specifically that he allegedly suffered mental illnesses that prevented him from “rendering his attorneys such assistance as a proper defense to the indictment preferred against him demands.” This Court finds this claim is procedurally defaulted to the extent that Petitioner seeks to assert that under Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. 375 (1966), the trial court should have sua sponte ordered a competency hearing and to the extent Petitioner seeks to assert a substantive competency claim, that he was actually incompetent at the time of trial and therefore should not have been tried;

- That portion of Claim V of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that Dr. Laipple was not an independent defense expert and that the trial court erred in not providing him with a psychologist or social worker, an expert on mental retardation and a forensic pathologist;
- Claim II of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim II of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and that portion of Claim VI of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the prosecutor suppressed material exculpatory evidence in violation of *Brady v.  - 1) improperly shifted the burden of proof to Petitioner on the essential elements of the offenses;
 - 2) improperly commented upon Petitioner's failure to testify;
 - 3) improperly vouched for the credibility of his witnesses;
 - 4) improperly emphasized irrelevant, inflammatory and prejudicial evidence;
 - 5) improperly testified and misstated the evidence;
 - 6) improperly took advantage of Petitioner's lack of funds to properly investigate possible guilt/innocence defenses;

- 7) improperly impugned the performance of Petitioner's counsel;
 - 8) improperly stated and argued the law applicable to Petitioner's case;
 - 9) improperly suggested that the jury had a duty to return a guilty verdict to prevent further deaths;
 - 10) improperly appealed to the passion and prejudice of the jury, and;

 - 1) argued facts not in evidence;

7) equated a guilty but mentally ill verdict with acquittal;

- Claim XII of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XII of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that he was either constructively or actually absent from proceedings at which critical issues were determined;
- Claim XXVI of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XXVII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XIII of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that Dr. Hark was allowed to testify without Petitioner making a knowing and intelligent waiver of the psychologist/patient privilege;

 - 4) improper biases of jurors which infected their deliberations;

 - 8) improper exposure to the alleged prejudicial opinions of third parties;
- Claim XXIII of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that his execution would violate the Eighth Amendment even if he does not meet the traditional definition of mental retardation because of the combination of his lack of cognitive ability and his age at the time of the offense;

- Claim XXV of the amended petition dated 1/4/02 and Claim XXVI of the amended petition dated 1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that evidentiary rulings by the trial court at his original trial effectively prevented Petitioner from presenting a defense, in violation of his constitutional rights, because Petitioner was not permitted to elicit testimony that the Floyd County District Attorney's Office and Floyd County juvenile justice system allegedly knew of Petitioner's alleged mental disorder and alleged high risk for violent behavior but failed to act properly;
- The portion of Claim XXV of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the proportionality review conducted in Georgia is constitutionally infirm, both in general and as applied;
- Claim XLII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XXVI of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that the lack of a uniform standard for seeking the death penalty across Georgia renders Petitioner's death sentence unconstitutional under Bush v. Gore;
- Claim XXVII of the amended petition dated 1/4/02 and Claim XXVIII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that the trial court's instruction on reasonable doubt at the guilt phase of Petitioner's original trial violated his constitutional rights, specifically that the trial court allegedly equated reasonable doubt and moral certainty;

 - 4) improper biases of juror which infected their deliberations;
 - 5) improper exposure to the prejudicial opinions of third parties;
 - 6) improper communications with third parties;

- Claim XXXI of the amended petition dated 1/4/02 and Claim XXXII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that the State presented unidentified testimony it knew or reasonably should have known was perjured at both Petitioner's original trial and his mental retardation remand trial;

- Claim XXXVI of the amended petition dated 1/4/02 and Claim XXXVII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that the trial court committed reversible error and allegedly violated Petitioner's constitutional rights when it allegedly violated Georgia statutory law by failing to sequester the jury for Petitioner's mental retardation remand trial; and
- Claim XLI of the amended petition 1/4/02, wherein Petitioner alleges that his sentence of death is being exacted pursuant to a pattern and practice of Georgia prosecuting authorities, courts and juries to discriminate on grounds of race, sex, and poverty in the administration of rights guaranteed by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments because, Petitioner alleges, the death penalty has only been imposed against defendants convicted of killing Caucasians.

Procedural Default Standard

To overcome the procedural default of these claims, Petitioner must demonstrate both cause and prejudice or a miscarriage of justice. The "existence of cause for a procedural default must ordinarily turn on whether the prisoner can show that some objective factor external to the defense impeded counsel's efforts to comply with the State's procedural rule . . . a showing that the factual or legal basis for a claim was not reasonably available to counsel, or that some interference by officials made compliance impracticable." Murray v. Carrier, 477 U.S. 478, 488 (1986) (citations omitted).

As to prejudice that excuses the procedural default, a petitioner must demonstrate “actual prejudice that ‘worked to his actual and substantial disadvantage, infecting his entire trial with error of constitutional dimensions.’” Head v. Carr, 273 Ga. 613, 614 (2001), citing Turpin v. Todd, 268 Ga. 820, 828 (1990), quoting United States v. Frady, 456 U.S. 152, 170 (1982). This Court finds Petitioner has failed to establish either cause or prejudice or a miscarriage of justice. As a result, these claims remain procedurally defaulted and are dismissed.

The Petitioner’s six main claims:

Mr. Foster argued six main issues of alleged error at his habeas hearing and in his post-hearing brief. Specifically, he contended that (1) the State struck all four black prospective jurors at the capital trial on the basis of race; (2) his counsel at the capital trial was ineffective; (3) his counsel at the capital trial had an actual conflict of interest that affected their performance; (4) the State suppressed favorable and material evidence at the capital trial; (5) the jury and the judge at the mental retardation trial engaged in misconduct; and (6) his counsel at the mental retardation trial was ineffective.

On those six issues, the court makes the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

Batson claim

(1) The Court finds that the prosecution did not violate Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 97 (1986), when it exercised peremptory strikes to remove all four black prospective jurors from the venire at Mr. Foster's capital trial. The Respondent argues that this claim is not reviewable due to the doctrine of res judicata. However, because the Petitioner claims that additional evidence allegedly supporting this ground was discovered subsequent to the Georgia Supreme Court's ruling in Foster v. State, 258 Ga. 736 (1988), this court will review the Batson claim as to whether Petitioner has shown any change in the facts sufficient to overcome the res judicata bar.

The Petitioner contends that the prosecutor's jury selection notes, which were turned over to the Petitioner subsequent to the 1988 Foster decision via an open records request, specifically identified all potential black jurors by the use of a green highlighter pen. There were four black prospective jurors qualified to serve on the trial jury, and the State exercised peremptory strikes to remove each of them.

Batson requires a three-step analysis: First, the defendant must make a prima facie showing of racial discrimination by presenting evidence of racial bias on the part of the prosecution. Second, the prosecution must offer race-neutral reasons for the peremptory strikes in question. Third, the court must determine whether the prosecution's race-neutral reasons were a pretext for purposeful discrimination in light of "all of the circumstances that bear upon the issue of racial animosity.” Snyder v. Louisiana, 552 U.S. 472, 476-478 (2008). At the final stage of a Batson inquiry, the ultimate burden of persuasion regarding racial motivation rests with, and never shifts from, the opponent of the strike. Jackson v. State, 265 Ga. 897 (1995). Mr. Foster’s Batson claim reached step three in the trial court. Now, reaching step three again on the basis of the new evidence presented in these proceedings, the court finds the following:

There were four copies of the traverse jury list from the Petitioner’s trial, and each noted that “[Green Highlighting] Represents Blacks.” (Hearing T. 903-26.) The prosecution or its investigators made written notations of the race of each individual prospective juror on its “qualified” juror list. (Hearing T. 949-950, 998-999.)

District Attorney Stephen Lanier and Assistant District Attorney Doug Pullen have both stated that they exercised their peremptory challenges for entirely race-neutral reasons, and that they did not rely upon the highlighted jury lists to make their decision on how to utilize strikes. Furthermore, both the trial court and the Georgia Supreme Court conducted lengthy examinations of the Petitioner’s initial Batson claims and found no error. This court cannot find that the highlighting of the names of black jurors and the notation of their race can serve to override this previous consideration, especially where the race of each juror was noted. While Miller-El v. Dretke, 545 U.S. 231 (2005) and Adkins v. Warden, Holman CF, 710 F.3d 1241 (2013) are cited by the Petitioner in support of his claim of purposeful discrimination, as both cases included the fact that prosecutors also marked the race of each prospective juror on their juror cards. This court finds Miller and Adkins to be distinguishable from the circumstances of this case, as the prosecution here has rebutted the purported evidence of discriminatory intent. The court finds the record evidence shows that every prospective juror, regardless of race, was thoroughly investigated and considered by the prosecution before the exercise of its peremptory challenges. (HT Vol. 2, 218-219, 221.)

At the Petitioner's Motion for New Trial, while under oath as a witness called by Petitioner, District Attorney Stephen Lanier explained that he assisted in jury selection at trial by Assistant District Attorney Doug Pullen and Chief Investigator Clayton Lundy. (MNT. 15-16). Mr. Lanier testified that over the weekend between April 24 and April 27, 1987, he, Mr. Pullen, and Mr. Lundy decided on the ten people they felt would be unfavorable jurors. (MNT. 17). Concurrent with the Petitioner's Motion for New Trial, the State also filed an Affidavit of Mr. Lundy, who testified that "having worked with and knowing Mr. Pullen and Mr. Lanier, each of us knowing the seriousness and penalty of this crime, can honestly state that the strikes used by Mr. Pullen and Mr. Lanier were not racially biased." (1987 R. 557). Mr. Lundy, himself African American, testified that prior to working as chief investigator in the instant case he had served approximately eight years as a police officer patrolling various neighborhoods in the Rome area. He explained that specifics on African American jurors within the notes and records of the prosecutor were likely information he knew from having lived in Rome all his life, and that he knew many people and could “just come off the top of my head with it.” (HT Vol. 2, 175-176, 206-207).

It is further clear that multiple staff members within the office of the district attorney including secretaries, investigators and other assistant district attorneys would take part in adding their personal knowledge to the lists of prospective jurors. (HT Vol. 2, 219.) Mr. Lundy testified that 10 to 12 different individuals would go through the list, make marks and notations and add “little stuff on [prospective jurors] that we know about each.” (HT Vol. 2, 220.) The motivation for the passing lists and notes on individual jurors was to help pick a fair jury, especially given that this was a death penalty case. (HT Vol. 2, 221.)

This Court finds that the record is clear that all jurors in this case, regardless of race, were thoroughly investigated and considered before the State exercised its peremptory challenges. The notes and records submitted by Petitioner fail to demonstrate purposeful discrimination on the basis that the race of prospective jurors was either circled, highlighted or otherwise noted on various lists. Furthermore, the State has offered evidence sufficient to rebut such a claim. The court finds that the State put forward multiple race-neutral reasons for striking each juror, and the Petitioner's claim of inherent discrimination is unfounded by the record. Importantly, this court notes that on direct appeal, trial counsel raised a claim that the trial court erred in finding that the prosecution provided race-neutral reasons for striking the four African American jurors. The Georgia Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's denial of this claim, finding that the prosecutor's explanations were related to the case to be tried, and were clear and reasonably specific. The Georgia Supreme Court held that the trial court did not err by finding these reasons to be sufficiently neutral and legitimate. Foster v. State, 258 Ga. at 737-739 (1988).

Accordingly, the court finds the Petitioner's renewed Batson claim is without merit.

Ineffective assistance of trial counsel claim

(2) The Court finds that Mr. Foster's trial counsel, Robert Finnell and James Wyatt, were not constitutionally ineffective at the 1987 capital trial under the standard set out by Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687 (1984).

To prevail on his ineffectiveness claim, Petitioner must show that (1) trial counsel's performance was deficient and (2) that the deficient performance prejudiced the defense. This requires showing that trial counsel's errors were so serious as to deprive the defendant of a fair trial, a trial whose result is reliable. Unless a defendant makes both showings, it cannot be said that the conviction or death sentence resulted from a breakdown in the adversary process that renders the result unreliable. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984). To establish actual prejudice, a petitioner “must demonstrate that ‘there is a reasonable probability (i.e., a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome) that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different.’” Head v. Carr, 273 Ga. 613, 616 (2001). Matters of trial tactics, even if they appear in hindsight to be questionable, are grounds to find counsel ineffective only if the tactical decision is so patently unreasonable that no competent attorney would have chosen it. McKenzie v. State, 284 Ga. 342 (2008).

Trial counsel was not deficient for presenting evidence of mental illness to the jury and trial counsel performed a reasonable mental health investigation

The Petitioner specifically contends that trial counsel pursued the defense of “guilty but mentally ill” and sought to prove that the Petitioner suffered from antisocial personality disorder. The Petitioner argues that at the close of the guilt phase, the trial court instructed the jury on Mr. Foster’s “guilty but mentally ill” defense, but clarified that “[t]he term ‘mentally ill’ does not include a mental state manifested only by repeated, unlawful or antisocial conduct.” (T. 2431.) The Petitioner contends that the pursuit of this defense was a misunderstanding of the law and evidence of deficient performance of counsel.

At the request of trial counsel, the Petitioner was evaluated by Drs. Samuel Perri and Patrick Brooks at the Floyd County Jail over a four day period. (1987 R. 178-180.) Drs. Perri and Brooks concluded that Petitioner was competent to stand trial and was criminally responsible for his actions. (1987 R. 178-179.) In addition, they found that Petitioner was “moderately depressed,” within the borderline range of intelligence and did not suffer from any brain dysfunction or any major mental illness. Id. Dr. Douglas Laipple also performed a psychiatric evaluation of Petitioner to determine whether he was “mentally competent to participate in his defense” and to determine whether there were any psychiatric diagnoses that Petitioner had at both the time of the evaluation and at the time of the crime. (HT Vol. 2, 400.) Following his evaluation of Petitioner, Dr. Laipple diagnosed Petitioner with mixed substance abuse and antisocial personality disorder. (HT Vol. 1, 61; Vol. 2, 429.) Dr. Laipple reported that the substance abuse included alcohol, marijuana, cocaine and other substances. (HT Vol. 2, 429.) In his report, Dr. Laipple found the diagnosis of antisocial personality disorder was “manifested by (before the age of fifteen) truancy, suspension from school for misbehavior, delinquency, persistent lying, repeated sexual intercourse in a casual relationship, repeated substance abuse, thefts, poor school performance, and chronic violations of rules at school.” Id. Regarding Petitioner’s ability to distinguish between right and wrong at the time of the crime, Dr. Laipple opined that Petitioner’s intoxication at the time of the crime prevented him from being able to distinguish between right and wrong. (HT Vol. 1, 62; Vol. 2, 429.)

The record evidence shows that trial counsel utilized Dr. Laipple at trial to attempt to prove to the jury that Petitioner suffered from a mental illness and to address the issue of intoxication. (HT Vol. 2, 366.) In presenting the testimony of Dr. Laipple, trial counsel explained that it was a “continuation of the environmental defense. It’s another section of it dealing with the impact of drugs and alcohol on human behavior, and Tim’s overall capacity with regards to his behavior, his IQ and so forth.” (HT Vol. 1, 60.) Trial counsel further stated they used Dr. Laipple’s diagnosis to show the jury Petitioner’s capacity and “to try and make him a more sympathetic figure to the jury and understanding Tim’s overall condition at the time this event occurred.” (HT Vol. 1, 60-61.)

The court finds that Petitioner’s two trial attorneys were experienced in criminal law. (HT Vol. 1, 80; Vol. 2, 307, 378-379.) Trial counsel conducted an extensive and thorough investigation into Petitioner’s background, family history, and mental health prior to trial. This Court finds trial counsel were not deficient in their investigation of Petitioner’s background and mental health and Petitioner was not prejudiced by the investigation or its presentation to the jury. As stated by Attorney Finnell: “. . . we were trying to get the jury to understand who Tim was and where he came from and what little resources he had to bring to a situation that he found himself in on that night.

Again, it was all an attempt to get the jury to understand that this was not a life that needed to be taken, in our opinion.” The court finds that the presentation of evidence of Petitioner’s mental illness was a reasonable trial strategy, and one that was presented in an effort to gain sympathy and avoid a possible death sentence.

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to challenge Petitioner’s confession

Mr. Foster made two confessions to the police. The first was unrecorded; the second was recorded on videotape. (T. 1726-27.) At trial, a detective testified about the first confession by reading from his notes. Defense counsel did not object. (T. 1731-35.) The State also played the videotape of Mr. Foster’s second confession for the jury. (T. 1744-72.) Defense counsel did object to the admission of the videotape, but the trial court overruled the objection. (T. 1566, 1572.) On appeal, the Georgia Supreme Court held that the trial court erred in admitting the videotaped confession because the interrogators told Mr. Foster that his confession “was not going to hurt ‘a thing.’” Foster v. State, 258 Ga. 736, 742 (1989) (quoting T. 1749). However, the Court held that the error was harmless because the second confession was “merely cumulative to the first, non-recorded confession.” Foster, 258 Ga. at 742.

The court finds that the failure to make a meritless objection does not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. See Scott v. State, 298 Ga. App. 376

(2009). The court finds that trial counsel did object to the admission of the second, videotaped confession. The court cannot find, under the circumstances of this case, that any objection made by counsel to testimony about the first confession would have been sustained, especially in light of the Georgia Supreme Court's finding that admission of the videotaped confession was harmless. Accordingly, the court finds no merit to this contention of error.

Trial counsel's guilt phase representation was reasonable

The court finds that trial counsel's guilt phase strategy involved a presentation of mitigation evidence. In keeping with that strategy, trial counsel informed the jury during their guilt phase opening statements that they would present evidence as to why the crime occurred and whether it could have been prevented. (TT. 1599.) Specifically, trial counsel stated to the jury that they would present evidence of Petitioner's life that was "void of parental responsibility, void of the values and value judgments that you and I bring to our family lives, and that we expect from our neighbors." Id. In addition, trial counsel noted that Petitioner had prior psychological evaluations performed by the State that "cried out for this boy to get help, to help him." (TT. 1599-1600.) Trial counsel asserted that neither the State nor Petitioner's parents helped him. (TT. 1600.) Trial counsel also stated that there was evidence of "marijuana, of alcohol and of cocaine in a boy that's borderline mentally retarded, who at the time this occurred was eighteen years old and was living with a twenty-six-year-old woman.” Id. Trial counsel also asserted that their guilt phase presentation would include evidence that Petitioner lacked the capacity to distinguish between right and wrong at the time of the crime, and that he was mentally ill. Id.

During the guilt phase of Petitioner’s trial, counsel presented the testimony of twelve witnesses. Three witnesses were employed at the Coosa Valley Mental Health Center in 1984, and they testified as to the various conflicts within Petitioner’s family. (TT. 2061-2078.) Part-time juvenile court judge Tim Pape and Deborah McDaniel, a unit director for the Division of Youth Services, testified regarding the Petitioner’s juvenile delinquency, his psychological deficiencies, and his troubled home life. (TT. 2082-2111; 2132-2145.) Tim Strickland, who was Petitioner’s caseworker at the Community Training Center, testified that he instructed the Petitioner to attend a substance abuse program due to his use of marijuana, but the Petitioner did not attend the program. (TT. 2146-2148.) Don Nix, an administrator with the Division of Youth Services, also testified regarding the Petitioner’s juvenile treatment record. (TT. 2153-2161.) Dr. Richard Hark, a clinical psychologist, testified that he interviewed the Petitioner and administered intelligence and personality tests. (TT. 2176.) Marnie Dodd, Petitioner’s juvenile court service worker in 1984, testified that she performed the pre-sentence investigation after Petitioner was charged in juvenile court in November, 1984. (TT. 2196-2197). After completing her report, Ms. Dodd had spoken with Judge Pape regarding her recommendations in Petitioner's delinquency case. (TT. 2198-2199.)

Trial counsel also presented the testimony of Petitioner's parents, Bernice and Ernest Foster. Ms. Foster testified about Petitioner's troubled childhood and drug use. (TT. 2212-2218.) During the questioning by trial counsel, Mr. Foster denied being under the influence of drugs or alcohol, but he was subsequently withdrawn as a witness because he appeared to be "hyped up." (TT. 2221-2225.)

Dr. Laipple was the final witness presented by trial counsel during the guilt phase of Petitioner's trial. Dr. Laipple testified that he conducted an examination of Petitioner. (TT. 2226-2227.) As part of his evaluation, Dr. Laipple interviewed Petitioner on three separate occasions, reviewed reports from other psychiatrists and psychologists, reviewed Petitioner's police statements (both the unrecorded and the videotaped statement), reviewed his juvenile court records, interviewed his parents and interviewed other people who knew or had observed Petitioner's behavior. (TT. 2227-2228.)

In keeping with their guilt phase strategy, trial counsel elicited testimony from Dr. Laipple that Petitioner lacked the ability to distinguish between right and wrong at the time of the crime. (TT. 2229-2232.) Dr. Laipple testified that the opinion was based on the drugs and alcohol that Petitioner had ingested that night. (TT. 2232.) He explained to the jury that the amount of drugs consumed by Petitioner would have been an “intoxicating amount” that would have resulted in “obscure judgment,” and Petitioner would have been unable to function normally and unable “to differentiate between right and wrong.” (TT. 2230.) His opinion was also based on findings that Petitioner suffered from substance abuse, anti-social personality disorder, borderline intellectual functioning, and the combination of these three mental disorders “incapacitated” Petitioner “to the point where he was unable to differentiate between right and wrong.” (TT. 2232.) Furthermore, Dr. Laipple testified that Petitioner’s level of intoxication would have caused the following: a disorder of thought; impaired judgment; an inability to recognize or deal with reality; and an inability to cope with the ordinary demands of life. (TT. 2230.)

Regarding Petitioner’s development of a conscience, Dr. Laipple testified that Petitioner’s development was “one that would ordinarily develop an antisocial personality disorder.” (TT. 2233-2234.) During his childhood, Petitioner’s parents failed to spend as much time with him as they did with the other children, and they frequently put the other children in charge of Petitioner and failed to teach him right from wrong. (TT. 2234.) In addition, Dr. Laipple noted that antisocial personality disorder seemed to be “genetic in nature.” Id. In Petitioner’s case, his father possessed several traits of antisocial personality disorder. Id. As such, Petitioner had “very little choice but to develop a lot of those” traits due to genetics and/or the exposures he experienced at a very young age. Id. In regards to the diagnosis of borderline intellectual functioning, Dr. Laipple informed the jury that this diagnosis was commonly referred to as borderline mental retardation. (TT. 2236.) As to Petitioner’s diagnosis of substance abuse, Dr. Laipple stated that Petitioner suffered from “multiple drug abuse,” which included alcohol, marijuana and cocaine. (TT. 2235.)

In closing argument, trial counsel asserted that they had proven beyond a reasonable doubt that Petitioner was mentally ill. (TT. 2346.) Specifically, Petitioner was involuntarily intoxicated and could not differentiate between right and wrong at the time of the crime. Id. In addition, trial counsel expressed doubts that Petitioner was at the crime scene alone. (TT. 2348.)

This court finds trial counsel’s guilt phase strategy and presentation to the jury was reasonable given that trial counsel possessed evidence that Petitioner was under the considerable influence and control by Lisa Stubbs who provided Petitioner with cocaine and alcohol. During the evidentiary hearing before this court, trial counsel maintained that involuntary intoxication was a possible defense in Petitioner’s case. (HT Vol. 1, 101-102.) In support of that theory, trial counsel utilized Dr. Laipple who opined that Petitioner lacked the mental capacity to distinguish between right and wrong and “he did it in the context of involuntary intoxication . . . that he was under the strong influence of [Lisa Stubbs].” (HT Vol. 1, 102.) In addition, trial counsel testified that they presented Petitioner’s parents during the guilt phase as they wanted to “establish that he was living with Lisa Stubbs, that he had left them and gone to live with her and kind of tie that into the . . . involuntary intoxication type thing.” (HT Vol. 1, 106.) The court finds that trial counsel used a reasonable trial strategy in presenting evidence of Petitioner’s juvenile delinquency, dysfunctional family life, drug use, and mental illness. The court finds trial counsel were not deficient and Petitioner was not prejudiced by trial counsel’s guilt phase investigation and representation.

Counsel was not ineffective in failing to investigate and present mitigating evidence

As conceded by the Petitioner, trial counsels’ strategy at the penalty phase was to “attempt to get the jury to understand that . . . this was a young man who came from a deprived background genetically, socially, educationally, culturally, in every aspect of life.” (H. 355.) Counsel “were hoping that if the jury understood that, that they would . . . find some sympathy for Tim that would dissuade them from imposing the death penalty.” (H. 48.) Trial counsel’s strategy also involved showing “his condition at the time of the incident being what we thought was intoxicated, under the influence of alcohol and marijuana and so forth.” (HT Vol. 2, 355.) In addition, trial counsel wanted to show the jury that Petitioner was mentally ill at the time of the crime. (HT Vol. 2, 356.)

Both counsel also testified that they met with numerous leading death penalty attorneys, including Millard Farmer, Bobby Lee Cook, and Clive Smith. (HT Vol. 1, 35-36; 86-87.) Trial counsel obtained the services of Investigator George Petusky to help investigate the case. (1987 R. 171-175; HT Vol 40, 12257-12261.) Attorney Finnell stated that it was difficult to obtain information from a community that was guarded with information and existed on the margins of society. (HT Vol. 1, 38-39.) Furthermore, although trial counsel had a good relationship with Petitioner (HT Vol. 1, 37; 85), the Petitioner remained “nonreactive,” “unemotional” and “matter of fact.” (HT Vol. 2, 297-298.)

Trial counsel found it difficult to receive assistance from Petitioner and his family, specifically his parents, grandmother, and sisters. (HT Vol. 1, 41, 64, 85, 105; HT Vol. 2, 309, 356.) Petitioner’s family was reluctant and unhelpful. (HT Vol 1, 37.) During trial counsel’s investigation, Mr. Finnell stated that he had a meeting with Petitioner’s parents wherein he tried to explain what they were trying to accomplish in regard to Petitioner’s defense. (HT Vol. 2, 356-357.) During that meeting, Mr. Finnell attempted to solicit their support “in terms of talking about who they were and what they were and what the environment that Tim grew up in and what were the influences, good or bad, in Tim’s life.” (HT Vol. 2, 357.) Mr. Finnell explained that they were essentially asking Petitioner's parents to "fall on their sword for their son by being reflective and self-examining their lives and what types of lives they lived and the impact that would have on a child." Id. Regarding the response of Petitioner's parents during that meeting, Mr. Finnell testified: "They were not cooperative. They did not want to talk about themselves or their lives, they were very defensive about it. At one point, I can remember Mr. Foster telling me that he worked on a garbage truck, that he came home, that he smoked his dope, that he laughed, and that was his life. And he wasn't going to – he was not going to portray that as something that was wrong or would have been a bad influence on Tim." Id.

Additionally, Petitioner's parents informed trial counsel during their meeting that they smoked marijuana with Petitioner. (HT Vol. 2, 358-359.) Mr. Finnell explained to his parents that this was "critical information" that needed to be presented to the jury to provide an "understanding as to who Tim was and what were the influences in his life." Id. In response to the assertion that Petitioner smoked marijuana with his parents, trial counsel's typed notes show that:

"Both Bernice and Ernest Foster admitted that they had indeed done so, even on the evening of the White murder, but contended that the use of marijuana only made Tim 'mellow' and really had no bad effects. Bernice and Ernest Foster vehemently declined to offer testimony in court that they had used drugs with their son stating that in so doing they would jeopardize Ernest Foster's job with the City of Rome and everything they owned. Bernice and Ernest Foster said they were good parents; that they would not get on the stand and say otherwise; that they had done all they could; and that they would not publicly admit to using drugs regardless of what happened to their son. Bernice Foster said she would trust God to take care of her son. She and Ernest Foster were angry as they walked out of the meeting." Id.

Trial counsel presented Petitioner's father as a witness during the trial despite the fact that his father did not want to testify. (FIT Vol. 2, 362.) When Petitioner's father entered the courtroom, he appeared to be in a "catatonic state" and could "barely get to the witness stand." Id. The trial court believed that Petitioner's father was under the influence of drugs and/or alcohol. (HT Vol. 2, 362-363.) Petitioner's father was removed from the courthouse and escorted to Floyd Medical Center for a screening. (HT Vol. 2, 363.)

The court finds that trial counsel made extensive efforts to involve Petitioner's family in the discovery and presentation of potential mitigation evidence, but the family was uncooperative. (HT Vol. 1, 37.) Accordingly, due to this lack of cooperation, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to present more mitigating evidence of the Petitioner's family life and influence.

Additionally, the court finds ample evidence in the record to show that trial counsel conducted a reasonable and competent investigation of Petitioner's case. Trial counsel obtained and fully reviewed previous trial counsel's file. (HT Vol. 1, 33-34, 83; HT Vol. 44, 13339-13390); (HT Vol. 1, 83; HT Vol. 2, 318.) Trial counsel met with Petitioner numerous times. (HT Vol. 1, 37, 85; HT Vol. 2, 382.) Trial counsel also viewed the crime scene. (HT Vol. 2, 372.) The court finds that trial counsel did conduct a reasonable investigation into other people's potential involvement in this case, specifically Lisa Stubbs and Clifford Stocks, but "Tim never pointed the finger at anyone else." (HT Vol. 2, 384.)

Conflict of interest by trial counsel claim

(3) The Court finds that attorney James Wyatt, who represented Mr. Foster and Mr. Foster's uncle, Clifford Stocks, in separate criminal proceedings, did not have an actual conflict of interest which materially or adversely affected the defense's presentation of mitigating evidence at the penalty phase of Mr. Foster's capital trial.

"A lawyer shall not represent or continue to represent a client if there is a significant risk that the lawyer's own interests or the lawyer's duties to another client, a former client, or a third person will materially and adversely affect the representation of the client." Ga. R. Prof'l Conduct 1.7(a) Criminal defendants have a right to conflict-free counsel and prejudice is presumed when counsel is burdened by an actual conflict of interest. Cuyler v. Sullivan, 446 U.S. 335, 348 (1980). Prejudice is presumed only where the defendant demonstrates that counsel “actively represented conflicting interests” and that “an actual conflict of interest adversely affected his lawyer’s performance.” See Strickland, supra at 692. An actual conflict is not established by the mere “possibility that a conflict might have developed” and a theoretical or speculative conflict will not impugn a conviction which is supported by competent evidence. Hudson v. State, 250 Ga. 479, 482 (1983). To prove that a conflict, in fact, existed, a petitioner “must demonstrate that the attorney made a choice between possible alternative courses of action, such as eliciting (or failing to elicit) evidence helpful to one client but harmful to the other. If he did not make such a choice, the conflict remains hypothetical.” Smith v. White, 815 F.2d 1401, 1404 (11th Cir. 1987).

The record shows that Mr. Wyatt represented Clifford Stocks in a theft-by-taking case and a separate armed robbery and aggravated assault case. (H.T. pg 755-757.) The Georgia Court of Appeals affirmed Mr. Stocks’s theft by taking convictions in March of 1987. All charges in the armed robbery and aggravated assault case were resolved either by plea agreement or were withdrawn by the State prior to October 22, 1986, which is the date Mr. Wyatt was appointed to represent the Petitioner. (HT Vol. 48, 14653, 14655.) The Petitioner contends Mr. Wyatt could not maintain his duty of loyalty to Mr. Stocks while also fulfilling his duty to Mr. Foster to investigate and present mitigating evidence of Mr. Stocks' negative and criminal influence.

This court finds Petitioner has failed to establish that his trial counsel was laboring under any "actual conflict" that "adversely affected" counsel's performance or that Petitioner's case was prejudiced due to the alleged conflict. Mr. Wyatt's involvement was effectively complete in Mr. Stocks' theft by taking case at the time of Petitioner's trial. Mr. Wyatt's representation in Mr. Stocks' armed robbery and aggravated assault case had ended prior to being appointed co-counsel in the Petitioner's case. Thus, this court finds Petitioner's claims of concurrent representation by Mr. Wyatt are not entirely accurate. Furthermore, Petitioner has not shown that Mr. Wyatt made a choice between possible alternative courses of action, and his allegation that an actual conflict existed in this case is hypothetical. The habeas record in this case reflects that Mr. Stocks' relationship was investigated by counsel and that detailed aspects of Petitioner's juvenile criminal activity and early use of alcohol and drugs were thoroughly investigated and presented to the jury. This court finds Petitioner has failed in his burden to demonstrate counsel were deficient in their investigation or that there was a reasonable probability evidence of Mr. Stock's alleged "negative influence" would have changed the outcome during either phase of trial.

Lead trial counsel Robert Finnell testified in the habeas proceedings that the Petitioner's relationship with Mr. Stocks was investigated by counsel, but that it was difficult to elicit information from the Petitioner. (HT Vol. 2, 382-383.) Trial counsel further testified that they investigated Mr. Stocks due to the fact that Petitioner went to live with Mr. Stocks around the age of fifteen or sixteen and because he was a "known criminal in our community." (HT Vol. 1, 39-40; Vol. 2, 361.) Mr. Finnell described Mr. Stocks as a "very shadowy figure" who had a "very poor reputation in the community." (HT Vol. 2, 361.) Both trial counsel and Petitioner's mother felt Mr. Stocks was a negative influence in Petitioner's life. (HT Vol. 1, 40; Vol. 2, 361.)

Trial counsel chose to introduce multiple witnesses regarding Petitioner's delinquent background and early substance abuse. Social worker Linda Lockhart testified regarding Petitioner's visits to the Coosa Valley Mental Health Center when he was 16. Evidence was presented regarding the Petitioner's dropping out of school, his unemployment, and conflicts at home with an older brother. (TT. 2068.) Lois Jean Smith, also employed by Coosa Valley as a social worker, testified that Petitioner's family environment was in a state of crisis at the time, that there was communication problems with Petitioner's parents and older brother, and that Petitioner's own mother's breath smelled of alcohol during the visit to the mental health center. (TT. 2076.) Ms. Smith stated that Petitioner admitted to using both drugs and alcohol but denied they were a problem. (TT. 2079.)

Tim Pape, a part-time juvenile court judge, testified that Petitioner was brought before his court on a petition for delinquency which was based upon an armed robbery. (TT. 2082-2083.) Judge Pape noted that a psychological report he had ordered at the time showed Petitioner and his parents smoked marijuana, and Youth Services had noted family and situational difficulties for Petitioner partially due to ten people living in the home. (TT. 2110, 2120.) Deborah McDaniel, a unit director with Youth Services, testified that Petitioner had admitted to using marijuana on a daily basis. (TT. 2137.)

The Petitioner's mother, Bernice Foster, testified that the Petitioner was the youngest of her six children. She began to have problems with him at a young age when he was playing Pee Wee league football, and would "get into it" with his coach and did not get along with playmates. (TT. 2212, 2215.) Ms. Foster further testified that when Petitioner entered junior high, he started getting into a lot of fights with others, including teachers and the principal, eventually resulting in him dropping out of school. (TT. 2217). Ms. Foster also testified that Petitioner used marijuana and drank beer. (TT. 2217).

The record in this case shows that Clifford Stocks' relationship to the Petitioner was considered and investigated by counsel. Rather than focus on Mr. Stocks's purported influence on Petitioner, the defense instead chose, as a trial strategy, to paint a detailed picture of Petitioner's background utilizing those employed in social services and the juvenile court system. As Petitioner has failed to establish deficient performance or a reasonable probability that evidence of Clifford Stocks' "negative influence" would have undermined the verdict in either phase of trial or established the presence of an actual conflict here, he cannot demonstrate ineffectiveness of counsel or resulting prejudice as to this claim. Accordingly, this Court finds no merit to the Petitioner's conflict of interest claim.

Brady violation claim

(4) The Court finds that the prosecution did not violate Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 87 (1963), by allegedly suppressing a police report stating that a confidential informant heard that Lisa Stubbs, Mr. Foster's girlfriend, was involved in the crime.

The Petitioner claims that the day after his former girlfriend, Lisa Stubbs, testified at his capital trial, the Floyd County Police took a report from a confidential informant who stated that he or she "heard talk" that Ms. Stubbs was present at the crime scene and assisted Mr. Foster with removal of items from the victim's home. A copy of this report was presented at the evidentiary hearing of this matter, and Mr. Foster's trial counsel testified that the prosecution did not disclose to them the existence of this police report. H.898; H. 373-74 (Atty. Finnell); H. 298 (Atty. Wyatt). It appears that the purported communication between the confidential information [sic] and the police occurred on the evening on April 30, 1987, which was the day before the jury returned its verdict finding Petitioner guilty on all counts. (1987 R. 370).

The court notes that this issue was not raised at trial or on direct appeal. Brady claims can be procedurally defaulted, and in order to overcome the default, the Petitioner must demonstrate both cause and prejudice or miscarriage of justice. As to prejudice to excuse the procedural default of a Brady claim, the United States Supreme Court holds that the proper analysis parallels the issue of Brady “materiality” such that if information is not material for Brady purposes, then no prejudice to excuse the procedural default of the Brady claim has been established. Strickler v. Greene, 527 U.S. 263, 302-303. To establish a violation of a defendant’s due process rights pursuant to Brady v. Maryland, the defendant must show: “(1) that the State possessed evidence favorable to the defendant; (2) that the defendant did not possess the evidence nor could he obtain it himself with any reasonable diligence; (3) that the prosecution suppressed the favorable evidence; and (4) that had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, a reasonable probability exists that the outcome of the proceeding would have been different.” Zant v. Moon, 264 Ga. 93 (1994).

“Evidence is material only if there is a ‘reasonable probability’ that, had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, the result of the proceeding would have been different. A reasonable probability is a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome.” U.S. v. Bagley, 473 U.S. 667, 682 (1985). The mere fact that some undisclosed information might have helped the defense does not establish its materiality in a constitutional sense. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776 (1983). “[S]howing that the prosecution knew of an item of favorable evidence unknown to the defense does not amount to a Brady violation, without more.” Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S. 419, 421 (1995), 514 U.S. at 437. Instead, a Brady violation is established only “by showing that the favorable evidence could reasonably be taken to put the whole case in such a different light as to undermine confidence in the verdict.” Kyles, 514 U.S. at 435; see also Strickler, 527 U.S. at 290.

In determining whether evidence is “material” in a constitutional sense, so as to establish a “Brady” violation, the United States Supreme Court explained that “[t]he judge should not order a new trial every time he is unable to characterize a nondisclosure as harmless under the customary harmless-error standard. . . . [T]he constitutional standard of materiality must impose a higher burden on the defendant. . . . [I]f the omitted evidence creates a reasonable doubt that did not otherwise exist, constitutional error has been committed. This means that the omission must be evaluated in the context of the entire record. If there is no reasonable doubt about guilt whether or not the additional evidence is considered, there is no justification for a new trial.” U.S. v. Agurs, 427 U.S. 97, 111-113 (1976) (footnotes omitted).

This court finds that the Petitioner has failed to establish either cause or prejudice, and the alleged Brady violation claim therefore remains procedurally defaulted. This court cannot find that the police report was in the possession of the State at the time of trial, that it was favorable, exculpatory or material to the Petitioner’s defense, or that the State’s alleged failure to disclose the report has resulted in a miscarriage of justice. Accordingly, as Petitioner did not raise these issues at trial and/or appeal and did not make a showing of cause and actual prejudice or of a miscarriage of justice which would be sufficient to excuse his procedural default of these claims, the claims are procedurally defaulted and not properly before this Court.

Juror misconduct, improper ex parte communications, and improper juror consideration claim

(5) In 1999, Judge Walter J. Matthews presided over the Petitioner’s mental retardation trial, which was held pursuant to Fleming v. Zant, 259 Ga. 687 (1989). The trial was held in Floyd County, and the jury found that Mr. Foster was not mentally retarded. M.R.R. 394. The Petitioner now claims that: a) juror William Harrison failed to disclose knowledge of Petitioner's conviction and death sentence during voir dire; b) the judge engaged in improper ex parte communications with a juror during the mental retardation trial; and c) several jurors considered prejudicial extraneous evidence surrounding Petitioner's convictions and sentences in deciding the issue of mental retardation.

This Court finds Petitioner's claims of juror and judicial misconduct in his mental retardation trial are procedurally defaulted pursuant to Black v. Hardin, 255 Ga. 239 (1985). The Court notes that following his mental retardation trial, Petitioner failed to raise any of the claims in his direct appeal. Foster v. State, 272 Ga. 69 (2000).

Juror Harrison

The general rule in Georgia is that jurors may not impeach their own verdict. There are exceptions when "extrajudicial and prejudicial information has been brought to the jury's attention improperly, or where non-jurors have interfered with the jury's deliberations." Glover v. State, 274 Ga. 213 (2001) (citations omitted). To be entitled to a new trial based on a voir dire examination, a defendant must show that: (1) the juror failed to answer honestly a material question on voir dire and (2) a correct response would have provided a valid basis for a challenge for cause. Glover at 214.

This court finds that Juror Harrison's affidavit does not show that he failed to honestly answer the material question of whether he had prior knowledge of the Petitioner's case at the time of voir dire. Rather, Mr. Harrison's affidavit states that he was aware the Petitioner was on death row prior to the first witness's testimony. Furthermore, Juror Harrison stated that based upon the evidence presented, he believed that the Petitioner was not mentally retarded. (Hearing T. 702-703.) Juror Harrison did not state that his verdict was based upon any prior knowledge of the Petitioner's conviction and sentence. Accordingly, this court finds that the Petitioner has failed to establish prejudice as to the claim regarding Juror Harrison.

Improper ex parte communication between trial judge and juror

Juror Helen Lane offered affidavit and in-person testimony at the evidentiary hearing. Juror Lane's affidavit states that she passed a note to Judge Matthews through the bailiff, and that she and Judge Matthews then had a conversation alone in his office. (Hearing T. Vol. 3, 733.) In her direct testimony, Juror Lane stated that she did not recall whether anyone else was present during the alleged meeting. (Hearing T. Vol 1, 124.) Juror Lane's affidavit and testimony also differ as to when the alleged ex parte contact occurred. (Hearing T. Vol. 3,735; 124, 130). Contrary to the allegations in her affidavit, Juror Lane testified that she did not believe she told Judge Matthews that "Timothy Foster was trying to escape the death penalty.” Juror Lane also testified that no part of the alleged exchange affected her decision as to whether the Petitioner was mentally retarded. (Hearing T. Vol. 3, 125, 130).

Judge Matthews’ testimony disputed Juror Lane’s affidavit and testimony in their entirety. Judge Matthews testified that he had never received a note from a juror who wanted to speak with him toward the end of this trial. He further testified that no juror had ever told him the mental retardation remand trial had something to do with the death of Queen Madge White, and that no juror told him that they realized Petitioner was trying to escape the death penalty. (HT Vol. 1, 143-144). Judge Matthews testified that when a different juror in this case passed a note to him wanting to discuss a media story which had upset her, the judge immediately brought in counsel for the State and the Petitioner before discussing the matter with the juror. (HT Vol. 1, 143). Judge Matthews testified that whenever he has received a juror note, it had always been his practice to notify counsel, and then meet with counsel and the juror to address any issues. (Hearing T. Vol 3, 143-144, 152-153.)

After reviewing Juror Lane’s affidavit, her testimony, and Judge Matthews’ testimony, this court finds that Judge Matthews’ testimony and credibility greatly outweigh the inconsistencies of Juror Lane. Accordingly, this court finds that no improper ex parte communications occurred between Judge Matthews and Juror Lane during the mental retardation trial.

Improper juror consideration of extraneous and prejudicial evidence

To the extent that Petitioner seeks to utilize the affidavit testimony of Mr. Harrison to undermine the verdicts of other jurors' finding that Petitioner is not mentally retarded, this court finds the testimony to be inadmissible. Bowden v. State, 126 Ga. 578 (1906) (holding "[a]s a matter of public policy, a juror cannot be heard to impeach his verdict, either by way of disclosing the incompetency or misconduct of his fellow juror, or by showing his own misconduct or disqualification, from any cause").

To the extent that Petitioner seeks to show misconduct by fellow jurors or that other jurors did not base their verdicts upon the evidence, this court finds the affidavit testimony cited is inadmissible as impermissible impeachment evidence, hearsay and speculation. The court further finds Petitioner has presented no admissible evidence that jurors based their verdicts upon extraneous evidence. Accordingly, the court finds no merit to the Petitioner's contention that he was denied his right to a fair trial by improper juror consideration of extraneous and prejudicial evidence.

Alleged ineffective assistance of counsel by Petitioner's remand counsel at his mental retardation trial

(6) The Court finds that Mr. Foster did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel at his 1999 mental retardation trial under the standard of Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 692 (1984).

Petitioner was represented at his mental retardation remand trial by Attorneys Jon Douglas Stewart and Michael Mears. Mr. Stewart became a member of the State Bar of Georgia in 1962. (HT Vol. 4, 1006). Following the completion of law school, Mr. Stewart worked for a firm for about six years wherein he performed insurance defense work. (HT Vol. 4, 1010). He subsequently joined a firm in Gainesville, Georgia, and he was placed on the appointed list in Hall County. (HT Vol. 4, 1010, 1012).

During his career, Mr. Stewart has tried through verdict over two hundred civil cases. (HT Vol. 4, 1054). Regarding his criminal experience, Mr. Stewart testified that he tried two or three jury trials. (HT Vol. 4, 1012). Prior to Petitioner's case, Mr. Stewart had not been involved in any death penalty cases. (HT Vol. 4, 1013). Although Mr. Stewart's criminal practice was geared towards the defense side, he testified that he specially prosecuted a murder case and obtained a conviction. (HT Vol. 4, 1013-1014). Mr. Stewart had also handled several closed head injury cases. (HT Vol. 4, 1055). In addition, he had attended numerous seminars that dealt with closed head injuries. Id. As such, Mr. Stewart knew that "trauma can drastically reduce the intelligence quotient of a fully active, healthy grown man who would otherwise have . . . an average IQ." Id. Mr. Stewart further stated that he "knew something about the brain" and how the brain “responds to various different things.”

Id.

Mr. Mears had extensive experience in the representation of capital defendants. Since the mid 1980’s, Mr. Mears’s practice had primarily been in criminal defense with a “strong emphasis on death penalty defense work.” (HT Vol. 5, 1175). During his career, Mr. Mears attended death penalty seminars. Id. In addition, he has “presented at a number of seminars involving criminal procedure . . . and the defense of death penalty case procedures.” (HT Vol. 5, 1175-1176). Prior to Petitioner’s case, Mr. Mears had tried about ten or twelve murder cases, and he had tried about seven or eight death penalty cases. (HT Vol. 5, 1176).

At the time of his representation of Petitioner, Mr. Mears had experience in cases involving mental health and mental retardation. (HT Vol. 5, 1177-1178). Mr. Mears described his experience with mental health and mental retardation issues as coming from “on-the-job training,” and that his “training was by exposure to mental health issues in the trial of cases.” Id. Prior to Petitioner’s case, Mr. Mears had tried at least two cases that involved incompetency to stand trial. (HT Vol. 5, 1177). He had also attended seminars wherein mental retardation and other mental illnesses were discussed. Id. In addition to their own experience, remand counsel also had the assistance and resources of other attorneys, investigators and a mitigation specialist from the Multi-County Public Defender's Office and the Georgia Resource Center. (HT Vol. 4, 1017; Vol. 5, 1194).

As Petitioner's case was remanded to the trial court on the issue of mental retardation pursuant to Fleming v. Zant, supra, it was Petitioner's burden to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that he is mentally retarded. Zant v. Foster, 261 Ga. 450, 452 (1991). After the presentation of extensive evidence from both sides, Petitioner was found not mentally retarded by a jury. In the instant habeas corpus case, this court finds Petitioner failed to establish that trial counsel was deficient in investigating and presenting his claim of mental retardation and that this alleged deficiency prejudiced Petitioner.

The court finds the record establishes that remand counsel conducted extensive research on the issue of mental retardation. (HT Vol. 24, 7078-7326; Vol. 25, 7327-7626; Vol. 26, 7627-7842; Vol. 27, 7980-7999; Vol. 29, 8752-8839; Vol. 30, 8864-8913, 9009-9033; Vol. 31, 9152-9172, 9184-9205, 9247-9252, 9382-9438; Vol. 32, 9439-9461, 9472-9635; Vol. 33, 9786-9834, 9890-9914, 9918-9933; Vol. 39, 11767-11984; Vol. 40, 11985-12040). As part of his preparation for the remand trial, Mr. Stewart testified that he "studied the medical," read numerous articles on mental retardation, obtained the manual entitled, "Manual for Attorneys Representing Death Sentenced Prisoners in Postconviction Proceedings," and talked with a psychiatrist to get himself "up to speed on the issue of mental retardation." (HT Vol. 4, 1025, 1044, 1056, 1128; Vol. 28, 8268-8416). In addition, Mr. Stewart purchased the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (hereinafter “DSM”) that was current at that time, and he then “memorized” it. (HT Vol. 4, 1024). Mr. Stewart also attended the entire trial of Earnest Morrison, a mental retardation remand trial of a capital defendant that was being tried by District Attorney Danny Craig in Augusta, Georgia, and he obtained documents from other cases that involved a mental retardation remand trial. (HT Vol. 4, 1024; Vol. 13, 3734-3989). Regarding his knowledge of mental retardation, Mr. Stewart stated, “I think I had a pretty good handle on mental retardation.” (HT Vol. 4, 1025).

The record also shows that Mr. Mears was knowledgeable about mental retardation. During his deposition, Mr. Mears testified that “proving or disproving mental retardation is not just an IQ score. There has to be a lack of adaptive skills and there has to be a pattern of mental retardation or inability to adapt to ordinary day-to-day skills.” (HT Vol. 5, 1207). As such, Mr. Mears stated that a psychosocial history was “extremely important when you’re trying to prove all of the prongs of mental retardation.” Id.

As part of their investigation, remand counsel and members of the remand team spoke with Petitioner’s original trial attorneys, Robert Finnell and James Wyatt. (HT Vol. 4, 1021; Vol. 5, 1206; Vol. 36, 10935, 10954; Vol. 43, 13109-13110). Remand counsel read the transcript of the proceedings from the original trial. (HT Vol. 4, 1037; Vol. 5, 1206). Remand counsel also received the files from Petitioner’s original trial attorneys. (HT Vol. 4, 1042; Vol. 36, 10959, 10966). Remand counsel and their team reviewed the State's file during their investigation. (HT Vol. 34, 10243; HT Vol. 4, 1049-1050).

During the investigation, remand counsel obtained extensive records regarding Petitioner and his family. Mr. Stewart testified that he obtained the records on Petitioner as he knew the "developmental history" was "very important in mental retardation." (HT Vol. 4, 1041). As evidenced by the record, remand counsel requested Petitioner's birth records and birth certificate, medical records, school records, juvenile records, DFACS records, psychological and psychiatric records, jail and prison records, criminal history and credit reports. (HT Vol. 23, 6753-6774, 6782-6796, 6800-6856, 6865-6866). In response to those requests, remand counsel received the following records on Petitioner: birth certificate; birth records; medical records; school records which included psychological testing; juvenile records; credit report; jail records which included escape records; prison records; GCIC and Central State Hospital records. (HT Vol. 4, 1040-1041; Vol. 5, 1320-1450; Vol. 6, 1451-1585; Vol. 12, 3636-3673; Vol. 20, 5818-6049; Vol. 21, 6050-6348; Vol. 22, 6349-6720; Vol. 23, 6882-6911, 6918-7025; Vol. 24, 7026-7079; Vol. 36, 10967; Vol. 40, 12373-12417). Remand counsel also had the raw data of Dr. Howard Albrecht. (HT Vol. 6, 1485-1520; Vol. 41, 12328-12372). In addition to the records, remand counsel obtained childhood photographs of Petitioner. (HT Vol. 23, 6744-6750).

Remand counsel obtained numerous records on various members of Petitioner's family as they wanted to determine if there was a "genetic component" to Petitioner's mental health problems. (HT Vol. 5, 1210-1211). Specifically, counsel obtained the following records: Petitioner's mother's school records, credit reports and marriage records, (HT Vol. 14, 4005-4022, 4026-4045); Petitioner's father's birth certificate, medical records, school records, employment records, credit reports, criminal history and criminal records, (HT Vol. 14, 4081-4226, 4230-4254); Petitioner's sister's (Linda King) birth certificate, medical records, criminal records, marriage records, credit records, employment records, school records, (HT Vol. 15, 4266, 4302-4306, 4310-4547; Vol. 16, 4553-4565); Petitioner's sister's (Teresa Foster) birth certificate, birth records, medical records, school records, employment records, credit reports, criminal history, psychological testing records, civil court records, (HT Vol. 16, 4644-4852; Vol. 17, 4853-5012); Petitioner's sister's (Ernestine Cunningham) birth certificate, birth records, medical records, school records, employment records, credit report, civil court records, (HT Vol. 17, 5046-5155; Vol. 18, 5156-5429); Petitioner's sister's (Dana Foster) criminal history and criminal records, (HT Vol. 16, 4587-4608); Petitioner's brother's (Ernest Lamar McConnell, Jr.) school records, medical records, employment records, credit reports, criminal history, criminal records, jail records, (HT Vol. 19, 5486-5499, 5503-5535, 5590-5659); The death certificate of Petitioner's relative Willie Mae Clemmons Foster (HT Vol. 20, 5759), and; The criminal records of Petitioner's relatives (James McConnell, Waschunn Foster, Lillie Heath, Thurman Cunningham, Jr., Morris King, Jr., Javan Staples, Claude Foster, Barbara Poole, Rosa Mae Finch, and Terry Foster) (HT Vol. 19, 5539-5587, 5661-5746; HT Vol. 20, 5782-5784, 5787-5791, 5795-5817).

Remand counsel testified that they met with Petitioner but he was not helpful in the preparation of the case. (HT Vol. 4, 1026; Vol. 5, 1201). Mr. Stewart tried to get Petitioner to talk about his childhood. (HT Vol. 4, 1027). Mr. Stewart testified that he never talked to Petitioner about the crime. (HT Vol. 4, 1026).

In an effort to obtain information about Petitioner's background, remand counsel and members of the remand team spoke with his parents and siblings and prepared memoranda detailing the information provided during the interviews. (HT Vol. 4, 1037; Vol. 36, 10856-10857; Vol. 41, 12420-12427). Regarding Petitioner's family, Mr. Stewart testified that they were "cooperative up until the time of trial." (HT Vol. 4, 1038). Mr. Stewart testified that Petitioner's mother was very involved in the case, and that Petitioner's other family members were not as involved in the case. (HT Vol. 4, 1039).

In describing Petitioner's family, Mr. Stewart stated that they were "very childlike," and that Petitioner's mother was "probably the smartest one of all and it was . . . hard to tell her what we were doing and why we were doing it." (HT Vol. 4, 1038). Mr.

Stewart described Petitioner's father as "nice," but he was mentally retarded "according to the physician that we had test him." (HT Vol. 4, 1039). Regarding Petitioner's sisters, Mr. Stewart stated that they were involved in "what was happening in their own lives." Id. Mr. Stewart made a strategical decision not to call the Petitioner's family as witnesses in the mental retardation trial because he feared they would have been unpredictable and unclear as to their purpose. (HT Vol. 4, 1045-1046). Mr. Mears testified that he also had concerns about the Petitioner's mother's potential behavior on the witness stand. (HT Vol. 5, 1208-1209).

Remand counsel spoke with some of Petitioner's teachers who were "very reluctant to talk" as the victim was "one of their own, and they knew, all of them, the story." (HT Vol. 4, 1037). Despite their reluctance, the record clearly shows that the remand team interviewed Petitioner's teachers and obtained relevant information. In addition, there is a chart from remand counsel's files that contains contact information for Petitioner's teachers, notes regarding the statements made by the teachers and information about scheduled meetings with several of Petitioner's teachers. (HT Vol. 5, 1362-1364). However, one teacher, Ms. Umberhandt, was not "as strong a witness in support of mental retardation as . . . first thought." (HT Vol. 43, 13115).

Remand counsel did not call any of Petitioner's teachers during the mental retardation remand trial as he did not believe that they would be helpful to the case. (HT Vol. 4, 1038). Mr. Stewart testified that “[t]here was no reason to call someone who was reluctant to testify and would not give you any information that would be helpful to you.” (HT Vol. 4, 1037-1038).

The record also shows that remand counsel spoke with one of Petitioner’s neighbors. According to a memo dated December 21, 1998, the remand team met with Katie Marcus. (HT Vol. 43, 13150). Ms. Marcus, who was a neighbor of Petitioner’s family, stated that Petitioner used to cut her grass. Id. She opined that Petitioner had “mental disturbances” as he was unresponsive at times when she asked him general questions. Id. Ms. Marcus also stated that Petitioner was a “good kid” who lacked a stable family environment. Id. Regarding Petitioner’s family, Ms. Marcus stated that they smoked marijuana and were “strange.” Id.

Another witness that was interviewed by remand counsel, Ms. McDaniel, noted that Petitioner was behind in reading and writing; however, there was no doubt that Petitioner knew the difference between right and wrong. (HT Vol. 43, 13153). In addition, she was “certain that Tim was not mentally retarded because children were typically seen by a psychologist before being admitted into the [Community Training Center] program” as they did not want children with low IQ’s in the program. Id. Ms. McDaniel further stated that her belief [sic] that Petitioner could pass the GED if he tried. Id.

In addition, remand counsel met with Lillie Mae Heath. (HT Vol. 20, 5786). Ms. Heath, who was Petitioner's aunt, informed remand counsel that Petitioner always had a temper and could "snap in an instant." Id. Regarding her opinion as to whether Petitioner was mentally retarded, Ms. Heath stated that Petitioner was not slow and did not develop at a slower rate than his siblings or other children his age. Id. She further stated that Petitioner "had lots of friends, helped around the house, kept himself neat and clean, and did well in school." Id.

Presentation of Petitioner's Mental Retardation Claim Was Reasonable

During their opening statements to the jury, remand counsel informed the jury that they were to decide whether Petitioner was mentally retarded as defined by Georgia law. (M.R. Trial, pp. 297-298). According to Georgia law, mental retardation was defined as "significantly sub-average general intellectual functioning resulting in or associated with impairments in adaptive behavior which manifested itself during the developmental period. (M.R. Trial, p. 301). Remand counsel explained to the jury that "significantly sub-average intellectual function" was an IQ of approximately seventy or below, and that there was a measurement of error of five points in assessing IQ. (M.R. Trial, pp. 301-303). As such, it was possible to diagnose a person with mental retardation if their IQ was between seventy and seventy-five. (M.R. Trial, p. 303). Regarding deficits in adaptive functioning, remand counsel stated that a mentally retarded person must have impairments in at least two of the following areas: skills; work; leisure; health; safety; home living; social and personal skills; communication; and self-care. (M.R. Trial, pp. 300-302). Remand counsel further stated to the jury that the onset of mental retardation must be before the age of eighteen. (M.R. Trial, p. 302).

During the mental retardation remand trial, counsel presented the testimony of two expert witnesses. The first witness presented by remand counsel was Dr. Anthony Stringer. Dr. Stringer, a neuro-psychologist, testified that the definition of mental retardation in the Georgia Code was “essentially the same definition” that was contained in the DSM-IV. (M.R. Trial, pp. 337-338). Regarding sub-average intellectual functioning, Dr. Stringer explained to the jury that this meant that a person’s IQ score on a standardized intelligence test placed them “roughly two standard deviations below average” and “in a range which is below that of approximately 90 to 95 percent of people their age.” (M.R. Trial, p. 338). In defining adaptive functioning to the jury, Dr. Stringer explained that it referred to the everyday activities that a person has to do “in order to be a successful member of society.” (M.R. Trial, p. 341). Dr. Stringer then provided a brief explanation regarding the skill areas contained in the DSM-IV that relate to adaptive functioning. (M.R. Trial, pp. 341-343). Regarding the third criteria for a diagnosis of mental retardation, Dr. Stringer stated that the onset must occur prior to the age of eighteen. (M.R. Trial, pp. 343-344).

Dr. Stringer testified that he had examined Petitioner's father, Ernest Foster, on February 27, 1999. (M.R. Trial, p. 346). During the examination, Dr. Stringer performed a clinical interview of Mr. Foster and his wife. (M.R. Trial, p. 348). Dr. Stringer concluded that Petitioner's father met all the criteria for mental retardation. (M.R. Trial, p. 371). Regarding Petitioner's father's adaptive functioning, Dr. Stringer testified that he exhibited "impairments in his ability to manage money, his ability to manage home and transportation, his ability to take care of health concerns, to keep himself safe." (M.R. Trial, p. 365). Further, the historical record provided by Ernest Foster and his wife and a review of school and employment records proved that the onset of his mental retardation was prior to the age of eighteen. (M.R. Trial, p. 366). In addition to eliciting testimony from Dr. Stringer regarding Petitioner's father's mental retardation, remand counsel also presented evidence regarding the correlation between heredity and the development of mental retardation. (M.R. Trial, pp. 335-336).

Remand counsel also presented the testimony of a psychologist, Dr. Robert Shaffer. Similar to Dr. Stringer, remand counsel elicited testimony from Dr. Shaffer regarding the definition of mental retardation and the three prongs that must be proven to warrant a diagnosis of mental retardation. (M.R. Trial, pp. 432, 444-447). Dr. Shaffer provided the jury with information as to the various levels of mental retardation. (M.R. Trial, pp. 429-430). According to the established guidelines, a person with an IQ score between fifty or fifty-five up through seventy are considered to be mildly mentally retarded. (M.R. Trial, p. 429). Dr. Shaffer noted that some guidelines considered an IQ score of seventy to seventy-five to be in the upper range of mild mental retardation. (M.R. Trial, pp. 429, 431).

Pursuant to the request of remand counsel, Dr. Shaffer performed an evaluation of Petitioner. (M.R. Trial, p. 447). As part of his evaluation, Dr. Shaffer administered standard IQ tests and neuropsychological tests. Id. Specifically, Dr. Shaffer administered the Halstead-Reitan Neuropsychological Test Battery, the Stanford-Binet Intelligence Scale, Fourth Edition, the WAIS-III and the Vineland Adaptive Behavior Scales (hereinafter “Vineland”). (M.R. Trial, pp. 449-450). Dr. Shaffer stated that Petitioner obtained a composite score of 65 on the Standford-Binet [sic] and a full scale IQ of 58 on the WAIS-III. (M.R. Trial, p. 451). The results of the Vineland revealed that Petitioner performed at a “national percentile rank of less than one-tenth of one percent” in communication, daily living and socialization skills. (M.R. Trial, p. 453). The age-equivalent scores for Petitioner were as follows: eight years, eight months in the communication domain; five years, nine months in the daily living skills domain; and five years, eight months in the socialization skills domain. (M.R. Trial, pp. 453-454).

Regarding the neurological testing, Dr. Shaffer testified that Petitioner scored in the impaired range on five out of the six measures used to assess neurological functions. (M.R. Trial, p. 455). Specifically, Petitioner scored in the moderate level of impairment on the Tactual Performance Test. (M.R. Trial, pp. 456-457). On the Category Test, Petitioner “exhibited classical signs of neurological impairment such as perseveration.” (M.R. Trial, p. 457). Dr. Shaffer testified that the Category Test revealed that Petitioner’s “thinking was extremely concrete and quite narrow.” (M.R. Trial, p. 458). Regarding the Finger Oscillation and Trailmaking tests, Dr. Shaffer stated that the scores revealed “mild to moderate lack of brain development or brain compromise.” (M.R. Trial, p. 459).

In addition to the neurological testing, Dr. Shaffer testified that there was evidence from Petitioner’s history that supported his conclusion that Petitioner suffered from a compromised brain and central nervous system. (M.R. Trial, p. 460). Specifically, Dr. Shaffer testified that Petitioner was born six weeks premature with a “dangerously low” birth weight and was placed in an incubator for about two and a half weeks. (M.R. Trial, pp. 460-461). Dr. Shaffer explained to the jury that a low birth weight was “statistically related to deficits in intellectual functioning in later life.” (M.R. Trial, p. 461). In addition, Dr. Shaffer testified that Petitioner fell and hit his head on a rock at the age of four or five, hit his head on a car dashboard during an automobile accident at the age of six or seven, and was struck by a car while riding a bicycle at the age of ten. (M.R. Trial, pp. 461-462). As part of his evaluation, Dr. Shaffer reviewed Petitioner's prior test scores relating to intellectual functioning. (M.R. Trial, p. 467). In reviewing all of Petitioner's test scores, Dr. Shaffer noted that the test scores revealed a "gradual decline over the course of several years in the intellectual functioning of Mr. Foster." Id. The decline in Petitioner's test scores was indicative of a "progressive deterioration or some kind of progressive compromise in his intellectual skills." (M.R. Trial, p. 468). Dr. Shaffer informed the jury that there were six IQ scores obtained on Petitioner starting at age ten and then again at ages sixteen, nineteen, twenty-two, twenty-five and thirty. Id. These IQ scores started at eighty and then declined to seventy-nine, seventy-one, sixty-eight, sixty-seven and fifty-eight. Id. Dr. Shaffer stated that these scores demonstrated a "gradual decline in the intellectual skills that did originate in the developmental period." (M.R. Trial, pp. 468-469). In support of his opinion, Dr. Shaffer stated that Petitioner's score of seventy-nine that was obtained when he was sixteen years old could be lowered three to five points due to the fact that the test was ten years old at the time it was administered. (M.R. Trial, p. 471).

Dr. Shaffer concluded that Petitioner met all three prongs for mental retardation as defined by Georgia law. (M.R. Trial, pp. 462, 465-467). Specifically, Dr. Shaffer found that Petitioner's IQ test scores fell in the range of significantly sub-average intellectual skills, that Petitioner had significantly sub-average adaptive behavior and that these impairments originated during the developmental period. Id.

During their closing arguments, remand counsel reminded the jury that they were responsible for making the determination as to whether or not Petitioner was mildly mentally retarded. (M.R. Trial, p. 752). Remand counsel stated that a mildly mentally retarded person usually functioned at a sixth or seventh grade level. (M.R. Trial, p. 753). Remand counsel asserted that they had presented psychologists with “excellent credentials” who opined that Petitioner was mentally retarded. (M.R. Trial, p. 757). Regarding Petitioner’s mental retardation, remand counsel stated that the school records showed that he repeated the first grade, and that he struggled in the fifth grade with reading and spelling. (M.R. Trial, pp. 755-756). Specifically, Petitioner had difficulty retaining information and had minimal self-confidence. (M.R. Trial, pp. 756-757). As such, the school recommended that Petitioner be tested for a learning disability. (M.R. Trial, p. 757). The test results showed that Petitioner’s reading was at a 4.4 grade level, spelling was at a 3.9 grade level and arithmetic was at a 3.2 grade level. Id.

According to Dr. Shaffer, Petitioner’s scores on IQ tests steadily dropped. (M.R. Trial, p. 759). This gradual decrease in Petitioner’s test scores could be attributed to his premature birth, low birth weight and several childhood head injuries. (M.R. Trial, pp.

759-760). In addition, remand counsel reminded the jury that Petitioner's father was mentally retarded. (M.R. Trial, p. 760). As such, Petitioner was predisposed to be mentally retarded due to heredity. Id.

Regarding the allegations made by the State that Petitioner was malingering, remand counsel asserted that Petitioner's test scores would be "scattered" if he were malingering. (M.R. Trial, p. 763). Dr. Shaffer testified that all of Petitioner's test scores were consistent, which ruled out the possibility that Petitioner was malingering. (M.R. Trial, pp. 762-763). In addition, Dr. Shaffer administered several tests to Petitioner, and the test scores were all consistent. (M.R. Trial, p. 763). During his deposition, Mr. Stewart testified as to his difficulty in proving to the jury that Petitioner was mentally retarded. Specifically, Mr. Stewart stated: "... it was a hard burden to over – to carry, to show that because he was still mentally retarded even though the test grades prior to age 16 showed that he was above the score for mental retardation, and to try to explain that." (HT Vol. 4, 1066-1067).

Further, remand counsel's presentation at trial was reasonable as adaptive behavior deficits were properly introduced through an expert witness rather than lay witnesses. The court finds no deficient performance in remand counsel's failure to call lay witnesses who the Petitioner contends could have testified regarding deficits in adaptive behavior. Dr. Shaffer testified that: "In looking at the Vineland Adaptive Behavior Scales we provide what is called a structured interview to the people in this patient's life who have the best information about what he actually did during the developmental period . . . just hundreds of questions that the individual person responds to based on their personal observations of Mr. Foster." (M.R. Trial, p. 452). Thus, lay witness testimony was incorporated through Dr. Shaffer's use of a standardized measure. Dr. Shaffer further testified that based upon his results, the Petitioner had significantly sub-average general intellectual functioning. (M.R. Trial, p. 454). Therefore, this court finds that adaptive behavior deficits were reasonably presented at trial.

Remand counsel reasonably relied upon the presentation of Petitioner's IQ scores, as those scores were directly obtained through contemporaneous intelligence testing conducted by Petitioner's own experts. (M.R. Trial, pp. 356-357, p. 451). Drs. Stringer and Shaffer testified directly as to their findings, and submitted to cross examination by the State. Neither IQ test introduced by the State was done so through the testing agent for verification and explanation of their findings. (Pet. PHB 88). Thus, this Court finds remand counsel's choice to directly present and explain his own IQ findings through the experts who obtained those scores rather than directly challenge those introduced by the State was reasonable.

Remand counsel were not deficient in failing to object to letters attributed to Petitioner from his prison file

Petitioner alleges that remand counsel were ineffective in failing to object to the introduction of the letters that the State attributed to Petitioner from his prison file and were rendered ineffective by withdrawing their objection to the admissibility of those letters. During the mental retardation remand trial, the State introduced three handwritten letters that were identified by employees of the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Prison as being written by Petitioner. (M.R. Trial, pp. 607-618). Mr. Stewart testified during his deposition that he believed that the letters were not written by the same person. (HT Vol. 4, 1046). He acknowledged that one of the letters might have been written by Petitioner; however, Mr. Stewart stated that Petitioner did not write all three letters as the “three handwritings were so different from each other that practically a blind man could tell that.” (HT Vol. 4, 1048).

During a discussion with the remand court as to the admissibility of the three letters, remand counsel stated that it would be “unfair and prejudicial” if one of the letters was admitted into the evidence and the other two letters were not admitted. (M.R. Trial, p. 651). Remand counsel explained that one of the State’s witnesses had stated on cross-examination that all three letters were written by the same person. (M.R. Trial, p. 652). As such, remand counsel argued that the jury had the “right to consider that.” Id. Remand counsel subsequently withdrew its objection to the letters and requested that portions of the letters be redacted. (M.R. Trial, p. 654). Remand counsel and the State were then afforded an opportunity to review the letters to see if they could agree upon the redactions. (M.R. Trial, pp. 654-655). As evidenced by the exhibits, there were some portions of the letters that were redacted. (State Exhibits 3-5).

This court finds Petitioner has failed to show any deficiency or prejudice as remand counsel was able to first persuade the court that allowance of just one of the three letters would be prejudicial, and second that portions of the letters should be redacted. Having all three letters introduced allowed remand counsel to distinguish the handwriting styles of each letter, casting doubt upon the State's assertion that all three were written by Petitioner. Given this strategic decision of remand counsel, this court finds Petitioner cannot show deficiency or prejudice as to this claim.

This court finds Petitioner has failed to demonstrate any deficiency or prejudice arising from remand counsel's reasonable presentation during Petitioner's mental retardation trial. Accordingly, this claim is denied, and the Petitioner is not entitled to a new mental retardation trial on the basis of ineffective assistance of counsel.

Claims that are non-cognizable are precluded from review by this court

This Court finds the following allegations raised by Petitioner fail to allege grounds which would constitute a constitutional violation in the proceedings which resulted in Petitioner's conviction and sentence and are therefore barred from review by this habeas corpus court as non-cognizable under O.C.G.A. § 9-14-42(a).

- Claim XXXII of the amended petition dated 1/4/02 and Claim XXXIII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that he is actually innocent and his continued incarceration or execution would violate his constitutional rights. This Court dismisses this claim non-cognizable as it fails to allege a substantial violation of constitutional rights in the proceedings which resulted in Petitioner's convictions and sentences.
- Claim XV of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XV of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XX of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges cumulative error. This Court dismisses this claim as non-cognizable as it fails to allege a substantial violation of constitutional rights in the proceedings which resulted in Petitioner's convictions and sentences, or, in the alternative, deny this claim as being without merit.
- Claim VII of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim VII of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XXII of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that he is severely mentally ill and that under evolving standards of decency, his execution would therefore allegedly violate the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution and analogous provisions of the Georgia Constitution, a claim which Respondent denies. This Court dismisses this claim as non-cognizable because, since there is no constitutional right not to be executed if mentally ill, this claim fails to allege a substantial violation of constitutional rights in the proceedings which resulted in his conviction and sentence.

- Claim XX of the amended petition dated 1/4/02, Claim XX of the amended petition dated 1/26/04 and Claim XXVII of the amended petition dated 7/10/06, wherein Petitioner alleges that as provided for in the protocols promulgated by the Georgia Department of Corrections, lethal injection constitutes cruel and unusual punishment. This Court dismisses this claim as non-cognizable as it fails to allege a substantial violation of constitutional rights in the proceedings which resulted in his conviction and sentence or, in the alternative, deny this claim as being without merit.
- Claim XXI of the amended petition dated 1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that to subject him to death by lethal injection would subject him to punishment under a law which is ex post facto. The Court dismisses this claim as non-cognizable as it fails to allege a substantial violation of constitutional rights in the proceedings which resulted in his conviction.
- Claim XXI of the amended petition dated 1/4/02 and Claim XXII of the amended petition dated

1/26/04, wherein Petitioner alleges that the statute in force at the time he was sentenced to death, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-38, which merely provides for the method of execution of a death sentence in Georgia, was declared unconstitutional in Dawson v. State, 274 Ga. 327 (2001), and that his death sentence is therefore null and void and may not be carried out. The Court dismisses this claim as non-cognizable as it fails to allege a substantial violation of constitutional rights in the proceedings which resulted in his conviction and sentence or, in the alternative, deny this claim as being without merit.

This Court dismisses these claims as non-cognizable as they fail to allege a substantial violation of constitutional rights in the proceedings which resulted in Petitioner's sentence.

All other claims made by Petitioner which are not specifically addressed by the court in this order are DENIED.

The Clerk of Court is directed to furnish a copy of this order to counsel for the parties.

AND SO ORDERED, this 4th day of December, 2013.

He/She also stated that she (girlfriend) helped carry some of the stolen items from the house. Talk was that Foster was not naming her (girlfriend) because he thought he stood better chance of insanity sentence.

This was the end of the conversation.

RE: Batson Challenge
DATE: August 21, 1987

Enclosed you will find as complete a copy of the respective jurors in my stated challenges. Some questions that I have regarding the way to handle the Batson issue on September 3 are as follows:

1. Jamie has taken great lengths to do a statistical study of how I used my strikes vs. acceptances and consequently has shown a discriminatory pattern in jury selection. Should I obtain the services of a statistician to refute these charges or what is the best way to handle this approach?

2. In light of the affidavits obtained from three of the four prospective jurors, should I have Clayton or myself interview these three jurors in order to try to refute any of these affidavits? I also need the law on affidavits vs. live testimony.

3. Should I also obtain an affidavit from Clayton Lundy stating that Mary Turner was not a sister of his and that he advised me not to select her or Marilyn Garrett or should I leave well enough alone?

4. Should we (you and I) be prepared to testify concerning our views on jury selection?

5. Should we obtain affidavits from Church of Christ individuals concerning Eddie Hood's position with the Church of Christ?

6. Should I obtain affidavits or how is the best way to approach the Head Start Affiliation of Marilyn Garrett as to that organizations affiliation with low income underprivileged children.?

7. What is the best way to handle the defense assertions that the state did not inquire of the jurors concerning their biasis, prejudices, religious affiliations as opposed to questioning them uniformly as we did in the Batson Case in light of the decision in Gamble v. State which said that the District Attorney did not question them at all.

8. Are we going to have to be prepared to give our reasons for every acceptance, every strike of a particular juror, in light of the Gamble decision?

9. Please also review the Dorothy Black transcript which is enclosed for your reference. I am concerned about the jurors inability to state unequivocally that she could not oppose the death penalty in light of recent case decisions that say to do otherwise is reversible error to excuse her for cause. What is the best way to handle this situation if in fact she should not have been excused of cause?

10. How big a role is courtroom demeanor, .i.e eye contact, quick to respond, going to play in the black jurors that were struck as opposed to white jurors how were accepted by the state?

11. How detailed should we go in the acceptances of white jurors as opposed to the excuses of blacks with regard to these jurors social/economic background, education, religious beliefs, etc. Finnell told me yesterday that Jamie had received the brief and all the documents from the defense attorney in Gamble v. State and has used their outline extensively in their brief to support racial discrimination. Should we also obtain a copy of the state's brief and defense brief in that particular case and try to respond accordingly. I think the bottom line question is, even though Batson does not state that the prosecution has to explain its acceptances or its excuses of white jurors, the decision in Gamble clearly implies that to do otherwise would be reversible error. What is the best approach in this in light of the Gamble decision?

Thank you for your willingness to come up here on September 3rd. I look forward to seeing you on September 1st and hopefully we can spend the better part of the day trying to resolve these issues.

RE: Timothy Foster Hearing
November 24, 1987, 10 A.M.

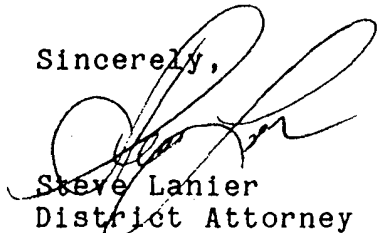

Dear Doug:

Enclosed is a copy of the "epistle" from Jamie Wyatt concerning Timothy Foster. I appreciate you agreeing to come up on the 24th (even though it is your anniversary) and I dare say the hearing should not take more than two hours. We should be through by lunch.

Please review the argument by Jamie Wyatt and I would appreciate any direction and advise as to which way to proceed. It appears the attack is a shotgun approach but I think we need to be unified in our presentation of rebuttal. Enclosed also is the Order by the Court on the Motion for Post-Judgment Discovery which Judge Frazier summarily dismissed.

I look forward to seeing you on the 24th. If you think it wise, I will be willing to drive to Columbus on either Friday or Monday to meet with you and discuss which way to proceed. Please let me know by calling 404-291-5210.

Sincerely,

answered affirmatively to Question # 41

Age - 64 yrs

Sequestration - hardship . Question # 42.

Excused for cause prosecutor is entitled to exercise permitted peremptory challenges for any reason at all - as long as that reason is related to his view of the outcome.

27W
12 → UNDER BATSON - A Δ is not entitled to a jury composed in whole or in part of persons of his race

Neutral explanation for challenging blacks

- explanation need not rise to level of challenge for cause
- prosecutor is not compelled to justify use of peremptory challenges against members not of the Δ race - however - when I strike a jury I look primarily at male/female combination and past experience.

① generally - women appear to be sympathetic to juror in D.P. case

② men appear to be more D.P. advocates

Consequently - usually strike more women than men

③ in the ⁴¹ cases that were excused for cause/agreement

29 women 12 men - 70% were women who were excused

④ in the ten death penalty excusals - 9 women 1 man - 90%

This follows trend that women are excused more than men - especially in my selection of a jury in light of 10 yrs experience & selection of juries

- 10 strikes - 8 women 2 men

- in a case of this nature - if I select women, they should be older, preferably living alone or retired, stable background, long term community ties

I, Clayton Lundy, assisted Doug Pullen and Steve Lanier in the jury 96/103 selection of Tim Foster. Before the jury was selected I did a background check on several of the black jurors who have been selected to serve on the jury of the Tim Foster case. The check on the jurors was done before, during and upon picking of the jury for the Tim Foster Case. My evaluation of the jurors are as follows:

SHIRLEY POWELL

Mrs. Powell lives on East 11th Street in a low income area, possibly went to East Rome High School. If so, she probably knows the family of Tim Foster. She has had a warrant taken out on her by Greg Plant and she has taken a warrant for Greg Plant. Both warrants were dismissed due to cross warrant situations, in my opinion, I don't think Ms. Powell would be a good juror for this case due to her age and possible relationships with the family of Tim Foster.

During jury selection it was apparent that Ms. Powell knew the family of Tim Foster and had been associating with the family. I recommend that we do not keep Shirley Powell. But, if it come down to the bottom line we might take a long look at her.

Upon picking of the jury and evaluating all the jurors I find that Ms. Powell would be alright to serve in this case.

EDDIE HOOD

Mr. Hood lives in a middle class neighborhood. I think Mr. Hood works at Georgia Kraft, and has been employed there for a long period of time. I think he has established himself in the community as being well-known and a good family person.

A criminal check reveals that his son has a misdemeanor conviction for theft by taking. In a non death penalty case

I feel Mr. Hood would be a good juror. However, because of his answers in voir dire

During jury selection I found out that Mr. Hood would not be a good juror because of his religious beliefs. Also, Mr. Hood, did not believe in the death imposition of the death penalty. So I do not recommend Mr. Hood. I recommended that he not be selected in this case.

Since there was a death penalty

During the picking of the jury, I recommend strongly that Mr. Hood not be selected. State v Foster 86-F-2218-2 97/103

EVELYN HARDGE

Ms. Hardge lives on Ross Street in a middle class setting in North Rome. Ms. Hardge lives with her husband who, I think has been sick for several years. Ms. Hardge has one son, who is in college somewhere in Tennessee. Also, Ms. Hardge, belongs to St. Paul AME Church and is very active in the Church. Since Ms. Hardge lives in the North Rome Area she possibly could have heard something about the case.

During the jury selection it was apparent also, that Ms. Hardge due to illness of her husband and her belief ~~not in~~ ^{Against} the death penalty. Also, that I believe Ms. Hardge would be easily persuaded and irrational. She also has a son who is approximately the same age as Tim Foster. Also, in her statement she would vote for life instead of the death penalty.

Upon picking of the jury I recommend she not be chosen.

MARY TURNER

Ms. Turner resides in a middle class neighborhood. Ms. Turner works at North West Georgia Regional Hospital. Ms. Turner is basically a good person and provides for her family. But Mrs. Turner's husband has family members with criminal records. Due to the criminal activities of Ms. Turner's husband's family, with which she has to identify with; I don't think in my opinion, she could be a fair juror in this case. Also, Ms. Turner has stated that she is my half-sister but ~~my family does not recognize her as a member of our family.~~ ^{this is not true.}

During the jury selection of Ms. Turner, she answered some of the questions on the questionnaire wrong. She denied having any criminal history in her family or husband's family. Also, during jury selection she stated she was my half-sister, and as I stated before ~~our family does not recognize her as part of the~~ ^{this is not true.}

Concern was ~~Lundy family~~. My biggest ~~question in my mind~~, she never mentioned Otis Turner as having a criminal history or her husband.

Upon picking the jury I recommend that we do not select this juror.

MARILYN GARRETT

Ms. Garrett lives at 306 East 18th Street, which is a low to middle income range. She lives in a possible duplex apartment. Mrs. Garrett comes from a neighborhood called Morton Bend, a community near Coosa, Georgia. The community is possibly all related. Ms. Garrett works possibly two jobs. One job, is at Pepperell and the other is at Headstart. Ms. Garrett deals everyday with low income parents and children that live in the projects close to where Tim Foster ~~possibly~~ lived. Sadvised Melanick Be very careful in picking Ms. Garrett for a juror in this case due to the case we have on Angela Garrett who lost a teaching and coaching job due to a Cocaine arrest ~~drug violation~~. If it comes down to having to pick one of the black jurors, ~~Ms. Garrett, might be okay. This is solely my opinion.~~

During jury selection I observed Ms. Garrett, that she was nervous and short with her answers. I was shocked when Ms. Garrett said that she was not familiar with the North Rome area when she worked ⁹ in this area, possibly two to three blocks away from the area where Mrs. White was killed.

I still in my mind have to say no to Ms. Garrett, the relationship with Anglea Garrett whom we have warrants on for Violation of Georgia Controlled Substance Act.

~~Upon picking of the jury after listening to all of the jurors we had to pick, if we had to pick a black juror I recommend that Ms. Garrett be one of the jurors; with a big doubt still remaining.~~

LUCILLE TAYLOR

Ms. Taylor lives in a low to low-middle class neighborhood. I personally do not know Ms. Taylor, but I knew her husband. Ms. Taylor's husband had been arrested for several different violations concerning alcohol. State v Foster 86-F-2218-2

Ms. Taylor 99/103

husband ran a beer tavern and cooked barbeque on the side. Ms. Taylor's family are good people. ^{De} Due to age of Ms. Taylor, if her health is good, she would be a good juror but also consider her husband's criminal history.

During jury selection Ms. Taylor was excused for cause.

EDGAR BRAND

Mr. Brand lives at 114 Perkins Street. He lives in a middle class setting. Mr. Brand is retired from North West Regional Hospital. Mr. Brand has a son by the name of Edgar Brand who lives with him and has been charged with Theft by Shoplifting. His son plead guilty and received a sentence of 12 months probation and $250 fine. I have a question in my mind whether Mr. Brand would be a fair juror on this case.

During jury selection he was excused for medical reasons.

BOBBIE JEAN JOHNSON

She lives in a middle class neighborhood and is well-liked. My personal opinion, she will be a good juror. I don't know very much about this lady. But because of her age, I think, she would be a good juror to keep.

During jury selection, this juror did not make a appearance.

LOUISE WILSON

Ms. Wilson lives in a middle class neighborhood before her health got bad. Mrs. Wilson belongs to the Metropolitan, a United Methodist Church, and is very active in the Church. I do not know very much about Ms. Wilson. In my opinion, Ms. Wilson, would be a good juror because she can identify with Mrs. White, who lived alone. They both are associated and very active in the church.

During jury selection she was excused for cause.

CORRIE HINES

Mr. Hines lives in a middle class neighborhood. I think Mr. Hines is retired from either Ga. Kraft or GE. Mr. Hines lives in the same neighborhood with 00/103 the Foster's. He possibly could know Tim Foster's father. Mr. Hines could possibly know more about this case because the neighborhood he lives in is where this happened. No more than two or three blocks away. In my opinion, Mr. Hines, would not vote for the death penalty because Tim Foster is black. Mr. Hines has a son that has been charged on two different occasions for Forgery and Criminal Damage to Property. His son is possibly the age of 20 to 28 years old. Do not let the other side sneak Mr. Hines in on us. Be very careful of picking Mr. Hines to serve on this jury.

During jury selection he was excused for cause.
