

What's new, from www.supremecourt.gov

- Beginning with the October Term 2015, post-release edits to slip opinions on the Court's website will be highlighted and the date they occur will be noted. The date of any revision will be listed in a new "Revised" column on the charts of Opinions, In-Chambers Opinions, and Opinions Related to Orders under the "Opinions" tab on the website. The location of a revision will be highlighted in the opinion. When a cursor is placed over a highlighted section, a dialog box will open to show both old and new text. See "Sample Opinions" for an example of how postrelease edits will appear on the website.
- The Court's Office of Information Technology is collaborating with the Library, the Reporter of Decisions' Office, and the Clerk's Office to preserve web-based content cited in Court opinions. To address the problem of "link rot," where internet material cited in Court opinions may change or cease to exist, web-based content included in Court opinions from the 2005 Term forward is being made available on the Court's website. Hard copies will continue to be retained in the case files by the Clerk's Office. See "Internet Sources Cited in Opinions."
- Beginning in October Term 2015, only Bar members who actually intend to attend argument will be allowed in the line for the Bar section; "line standers" will not be permitted. See "Visitors Guide to Oral Argument."
- The Supreme Court Fellows Program is now accepting applications for the 2016-2017 fellowship year. Click here to learn more.
